Veto override fails

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Following the pattern set by the Senate, the Missouri House failed today to gain a two-thirds majority in its first attempt to override a veto by the governor of bills passed in this year's legislative session.

Democrat Leo McKamey of Kansas City joined the Republicans in turning back the override attempt of a bill to give the American Bicentennial Commission more automonomy. It gained 94 votes, 15 short.

The Senate failed Wednesday in five attempts to override vetoes.

But even though the upper chamber was unsuccessful in overriding vetoes of bills that had been given a considerable chance, another attempt was expected again today on the same measures. The original defeats came with the absence of Democratic Sen. Edward Linehan of St. Louis, who could be expected to vote in favor of an override.

The House was to receive recommendations through its Appropriations Committee to override vetoes of $1.5 million for storm sewers in the St. Louis area and $1.4 million in capital improvements around the state.

"Right now, the capital improvements have the best chance," speculated Appropriations Chairman James Russell, D-Florissant, following a hearing of his committee on the matter late Wednesday night.

Although acknowledging that any chance of an override is slim because of the needed two-thirds majority of 109 House members, Russell said the capital improvements vetoes were in a favorable position because they involved revenue sharing money that would be lost if not spent in two years. He also pointed out that by going ahead with the projects now, the state could avoid paying the continually rising construction costs in the coming years.

The committee, however, failed to take a stand on some $3.5 million in funding vetoes for higher education after House Speaker Richard Rabbitt, D-St. Louis, said many department directors had confided to him they were afraid to publicly call for an override for "fear of retaliation in the coming years" from the executive branch.

Russell agreed with the evaluation after noting that many university officials who had decried the vetoes originally, indicated to the committee that they now could apparently live within the reduced budgets.

But Russell predicted that in light of the lukewarm attitude on the part of higher education officials, for whatever reason, "higher education doesn't have much of a chance as it stands now."

Those vetoes had been considered by key legislators as having a good chance of being overridden.

Earlier Wednesday, the Senate fell three votes short in gaining the 23-vote majority needed to override the veto of a bill to increase aid to junior colleges, the one rejected measure given the best chance of a successful override attempt by legislative leaders.

Senate President Pro Tem William Cason, D-Clinton, along with Sens. Richard Webster, R-Carthage, and Albert Spradling, D-Cape Girardeau, led the unsuccessful bipartisan override attempt which fell under a tide of sentiment against increased government spending.

Another measure turned down by Gov. Christopher S. Bond on the grounds of the state's poor fiscal situation was a $3 monthly increase for recipients of Aid to Dependent Children. That attempt gained only 183 favorable votes, five short of the needed 23.

Msgr. John Shocklee, speaking for a "poverty coalition" of the Missouri Council of Churches, the Missouri Catholic Conference and the Missouri Association for Social Welfare, lashed out against the override failure.

"Saddest of all is that the legislature has shown that the human needs of the people are not a major concern," he said.

Both Rabbitt and House Majority Leader Kenneth Rothman, D-Clayton, expressed regret over the failure of both the ADC and junior college bills. Had the attempts been successful, they said, chances for the needed two-thirds majority in the House were good.

Other vetoed Senate bills upheld Wednesday were regulation of grain moisture content, pay hikes for employes of the St. Louis collectors office and a pay boost for referees and court reporters in the state Workmen's Compensation Division.

Reconsideration is expected on the junior college, ADC, grain moisture content and St. Louis collector's office pay hike bills during the constitutionally required session.

Gas price hike began Wednesday

A rate increase for customers of Associated Natural Gas customers went into effect Wednesday, according to John Watson, a spokesman for Arkansas-Missouri Power Co. which owns the gas firm.

The increase for residential customers would total 7.6 per cent based on an average use of 100 cubic feet per month. Ark-Mo also put the rate increase into effect in Arkansas.

The increase will appear on bills where the gas meter was read after Wednesday,, Watson said.

The company had been seeking an increase of 16 per cent, but was granted 9 per cent by the Public Service Commission.

Watson said if the Public Service Commission does not approve a rate hike at the hearing in December, or if the rate increase is lower than the interim rate increase, the company will

Kay Franz, 23, of St. Louis was injured critically at 10 a.m. Wednesday on Highway 61 one- fourth mile west of Cape Girardeau when the car she was driving west was struck in the side by a southbound car driven by Lewis Grebe, 58, of Jackson, who received minor injuries.

A passenger in the Franz car, Thomas Sgollhans, 22, of St. Louis, received serious injuries.

All three were taken to Southeast Missouri Hospital in Cape Girardeau.

A Rockford, Ill., woman, Audra Randolph, 59, received serious injuries at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday on Highway 25 at Aquilla.

The accident occurred when Bernice Randolph, 66, of Rockford lost control of his northbound car while attempting a left turn in the face of oncoming traffic and skidded into a roadside ditch.

The injured woman was taken to Dexter Memorial Hospital.

Three persons were injured in an accident at 1:25 p.m. Wednesday on Highway 25 one mile north of Bernie.

The accident occurred when David Terrill, 30, of Parma attempted a left turn in his southbound pickup truck and struck a dump truck driven by Roger Truman, 26, of Bernie, as the truck was passing a line of traffic.

Injured were two passengers in the Terrill truck, Ray Pettit, 33, of Zalma and P. J. Johnson, 51, of Brinkley, Ark., and a passenger in the Truman truck, Ellis Caldwell, 63, of Bernie.

All three received minor injuries and were taken to Dexter Memorial Hospital.

Sickle Cell program set

NEW MADRID — An educational program on Sickle Cell Anemia will be presented Monday at 6:30 p.m. at the Head Start Center, 201 Pinnell St.

The program, sponsored by District Health Office No. 4 in cooperation with the Missouri Division of Health, will consist of a film, program procedures and a question - and- answer period. The meeting will be open to the public.

With recent public awareness of Sickle Cell problems, Sickle Cell Anemia is now receiving increasing attention from public health authorities. The Missouri Division of Health was recently allocated funds by the state legislature for a statewide Sickle Cell disease program. The statewide program provides public education and information services, counseling, consultation services, follow-up and referral.

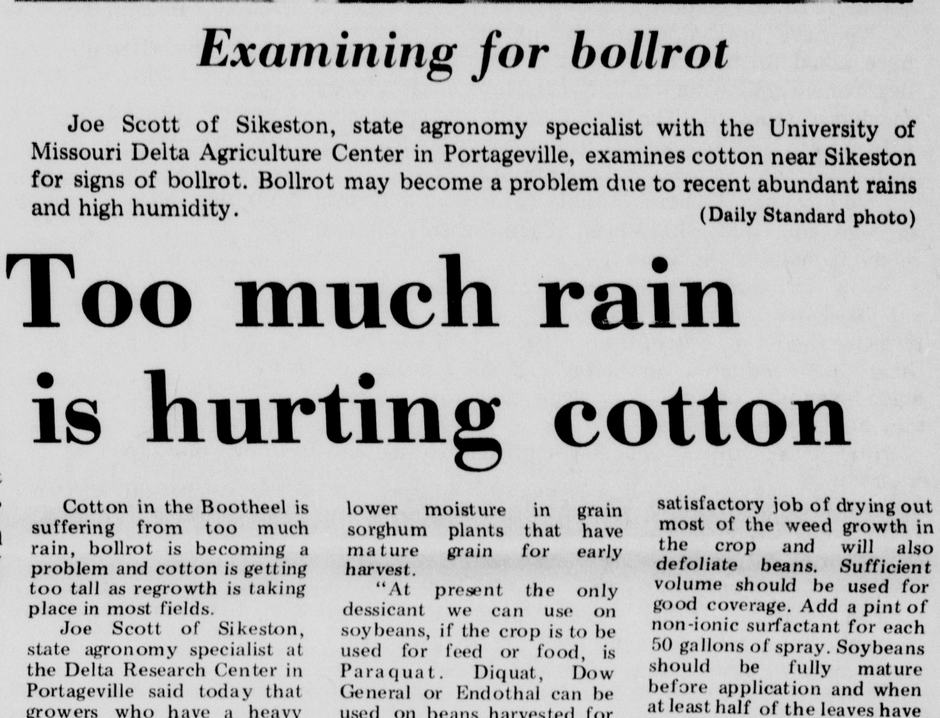

Sickle Cell disease is a hereditary blood condition that affects mostly black people and white of Mediterranean decent. It can only be detected by a special blood test.

Examining for bollrot

Joe Scott of Sikeston, state agronomy specialist with the University of Missouri Delta Agriculture Center in Portageville, examines cotton near Sikeston for signs of bollrot. Bollrot may become a problem due to recent abundant rains and high humidity. (Daily Standard photo)

Too much rain is hurting cotton

Cotton in the Bootheel is suffering from too much rain, bollrot is becoming a problem and cotton is getting too tall as regrowth is taking place in most fields.

Joe Scott of Sikeston, state agronomy specialist at the Delta Research Center in Portageville said today that growers who have a heavy bottom crop and with the danger of bollrot are preparing to bottom defoliate. "This could be a profitable practice as our crops are likely to be late and it could be sometime before the entire plant can be defoliated without loss of yield," Scott said.

Wet weather and rank cotton can also mean insect problems. Fields should be scouted often for bollworms and boll weevils. Bollworm counts are running high in some fields according to our Cotton Entomologists, he noted.

Soybeans have benefited from rains except on heavy soils which have become water- logged. Bean yields will be reduced on these fields.

"In early fall, we get questions concerning dessicants for soybeans and grain sorghum. Growers want to dry up growing weeds that will interfere with harvesting operations in soybeans. Recent rains have made this more of a problem. Grain sorghum growers want to lower moisture in grain sorghum plants that have mature grain for early harvest.

"At present the only dessicant we can use on soybeans, if the crop is to be used for feed or food, is Paraquat. Diquat, Dow General or Endothal can be used on beans harvested for seed only."

Scott said Paraquat, at the rate of 1/2 to 1 pint per acre, depending on weed in festation, will do a satisfactory job of drying out most of the weed growth in the crop and will also defoliate beans. Sufficient volume should be used for good coverage. Add a pint of non-ionic surfactant for each 50 gallons of spray. Soybeans should be fully mature before application and when at least half of the leaves have dropped. Immature beans will be injured.

In the case of grain sorghum, there is no

What has happened to law and order?

Recent articles about the operations of the New Madrid County jail seems to be more like a training center for further criminal acts than a place designed to hold people who have broken the law.

Sheriff W. L. "Cowboy" Ramsey reportedly knows of the beatings and claimed he does not condone the beatings of persons arrested in New Madrid County, however the list of reported beatings in the jail is rather lengthy.

One area law enforcement official commented that maybe Ramsey's trouble lies in his outside interests. Besides being the sheriff, he farms, owns a motel and trailer park. His salary was listed as the tops in the county in the most recent figures out of the courthouse.

Legislation should be introduced and passed, requiring that sheriffs relinquish all of their outside interests so that they can focus all of their attention of the job they are elected to do.

Another piece of legislation that should be considered, would require that sheriff's may serve only two, four year terms. It seems that those that have been in office for over a number of years, neglect their duties more and more as the years of service mount. This is common, but not true in all cases. Scott County is one we should be proud of.

We have noticed where the people of Perryville have asked for help in an investigation of their police department. Lawmakers should look into every incidence reported. The city, county and state law officers are paid by each of us and we should get the protection that we need ... not halfassed.

We have heard where a county prosecutor and state supreme court judge have been charged with violation of the federal hunting laws.

Now isn't that a fine howdy do ... These people are supposed to set prime examples ... We bet they pressure their way out of the situation. That's the way things are conducted now-a-days ... They should be made examples of, not just write them off because they hold some big office.

Now, I ask you ... What has happened to law and order?

ORGIN OF THE WHITE HOUSE

The White House at Washington, D.C., is a plain but impressive mansion, set in a green park overlooking the wide waters of the Potomac River. Stately and dignified, shadowed by tall sycamores, oaks, and poplars, the President's house has for more than a century sheltered the nation's leaders.

George Washington, who loved the Potomac country, selected the site, and James Hoban, a talented young Irish architect, designed the house, modeling it after the Grecian palace of the Duke of Leinster near Dublin. It was built of Virginia sandstone, being completed in 1799.

In 1814, after the battle of Bladensburg, the British occupied Washington and ransacked the Executive Mansion. After they had set fire to the building, a heavy rain began to fall, which continued all that night. The building was not heavily damaged, but was discolored by smoke. Later, the building was painted white, to cover the fire stains.

Since that time, the "White House" has been covered at regular intervals with thick coats of white paint, which serves to prevent crumbling of the sandstone walls, and gives it its named.

STRETCHING HEALTH DOLLARS

Economizing on medical care is something that most of us look upon with a jaundiced eye. Shopping for good health at a bargain counter is generally a bad policy. However, there are legitimate, commonsense ways to economize even here.

The American Medical Association points out that you can cut your medical bills and offers some sound suggestions for doing so. Not only do the suggestions stretch the medical dollar, but actually, if followed, they would provide better protection for a family. The first recommendation is to have a family doctor. He should be chosen carefully for his reputation in the community, the type of practice he has developed and his availability. The local medical society can supply names of physicians from which a choice can be made. Your neighbors or your minister can frequently offer helpful advice. When a person starts going to a physician, he should ask him frankly about his fees. It should be remembered that it doesn't pay to wait too long to see a doctor in the hope of saving money on medical bills since this defeats the purpose of preventive medicine, and emergencies are always more expensive. Everyone should have a periodic checkup then, whenever possible if illness occurs, use the telephone -- your family doctor can frequently give advice over the phone regarding minor health problems -- when he is familiar with the health history of his patient. Buy enough health insurance -- in the long run health insurance is a bargain. People 65 or over should check their eligibility for medicare, and everyone should take allowable tax deductions for medical expenses.

Finally, the best way to hold down medical expenses, says the AMA, is to "Stay healthy! ... Your health is determined in large measure by the kind of life you lead." Everyone should follow these commonsense suggestions for better health at lower cost.

OUR TURN TO BLINK

While the United States is preoccupied with controlling inflation and making indices of prices and jobs behave as people think they should, a grim real world beyond America's borders is proceeding to prove that the laws of the jungle still prevail. Mr. Hugh Sidey, writing in Life magazine under the title "The arms race hasn't stopped," tells of the staggering buildup in Soviet military strength. He also tells how "... developments in Russian weaponry are now coming so fast and are so complex that it is difficult to know how to tell the press and the public about them." American officials, says Mr. Sidey, expect one day soon the equivalent of another Sputnik.

Another columnist, Mr. Stewart Alsop, who has repeatedly devoted his columns to the Russian military buildup, especially of nuclear missiles and submarines, foresees " ... the serious possibility that the Soviets are building up for a new eyeball-to-eyeball nuclear confrontation, like the 1962 Cuban crisis, in which it would be our turn to blink. The likely locale of the confrontation is obvious — the Middle East." While Americans dream of a generation of peace they could well be preparing the way for another Pearl Harbor — or worse. At the very least, we are now living in a period when "grim surprises" of a military nature can be expected momentarily.

The statistics say that the federal government is now a larger dispenser of fringe benefits than private industry. In 1970, fringe benefits in private industry amounted to 26.6 percent of basic wages and salaries while the figure for the federal government was 27.8 percent. This contrasted with the last survey made by the U.S. Labor Department in 1968, when private employer expenditures came to 25.1 percent and the federal government's were 24.3 percent.

The image of government as a progressive employer compared to private enterprise should be tempered by the fact that private enterprise carries a double burden. It must pay for its own fringe benefits as well as put up the taxes that go to support the fringe benefits of those who work for government. It is hardly a fair comparison.

GRAVE CONSEQUENCES

Until recently, spokesmen for the investor-owned, business-managed electric utility industry in the United States expressed the belief that the power needs of the country could be met and electric energy reserves steadily increased. Now they are not so sure.

In a blunt statement of facts, Mr. Shearon Harris, president of a major electric company and chairman of the Edison Electric Institute, reports: "The rush to establish environmental regulations and to legislate environmental quality in a hurry is leading our nation toward a situation in which the electric utility industry, one of the best tools we have available to our society for helping to deal with environmental problems, could be severely crippled." Mr. Harris listed four examples of court rulings and governmental actions which led to his warning. These include: denial of a partial operating license for the Quad Cities Nuclear Plant in Illinois; a court ruling under the 1899 Refuse Act which holds, "The potential for delaying construction of needed facilities and of bringing industrial production to a virtual standstill through application of the National Environmental Policy Act in ways its authors surely never intended ...;" proposed water quality legislation, which goes further than any law yet passed, if it were to become law would cost the electric utility industry alone -- and thus its customers -- between $15 and $28 billion; the Environmental Protection Agency has published performance standards setting limits for sulfur emissions at coal-burning electric generating stations which, in most parts of the nation, require installation of equipment that is simply not available.

The consequences of the combination of environmental extremism and government regulation gone berserk can be graver and more far-reaching than the public suspects.

CRIMINALS IN ACTION

Two incidents on the crime front in recent weeks have horrified the nation and driven home the point to all of us that criminal activity must be checked if citizens are to live in security and without fear. The first of these headline stories broke at the Texas state prison at Huntsville where a hardened core of inmates seized hostages and kept authorities at bay for more than a week. Two of the hostages were slain when lawmen finally broke through to end the attempted breakout.

The second story concerned a prison break in Colorado. Three men who escaped there went on a crime spree in Texas, killing and wounding innocent victims, raping women, stealing automobiles and weapons and terrorizing a section of North Texas.

Only the bravery of police officers put a halt to these outrageous sprees. That is the job of officers, but we, the citizens who look to them for protection, have a part to play also. Lawmen are undermanned as they stand between us and the jungle. As citizens we can see to it that our communities get more policemen, provide them with better equipment and training and show civic pride in their accomplishments. We can also see to it that prosecution staffs are sufficient and that the laws of our states are ample to deal with criminals, including the death penalty.

We suggest that you look into the crime picture of your own community and then discuss with your neighbors and authorities what you can do to help. HLH

GOOD NEIGHBORS

WASHINGTON -- Every time you come back from vacation you find some old neighbors have moved out and new people have moved in. Take my neighborhood, for example. You can imagine my surprise when I saw some strange kids playing on the lawn at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue.

"Who are those kids?" I asked my friend Marty.

"Oh, didn't you know? The Nixons moved out in August."

"They did?" I said in surprise. "It's funny they didn't mention anything about it when I left in July. It must have been awfully sudden. Did they give any reason why they were leaving?"

"No," Marty said, "one day they were there, and the next day a moving van pulled up and they were gone. You know how old man Nixon used to keep his thoughts to himself, so we weren't too surprised when he upped and left."

"That's a shame," I said. "He was a nice fellow and never caused anyone any bother. I'm sorry I didn't have a chance to say goodby. Any idea where they went?"

"I'm not too sure. I think maybe Peoria."

"Why Peoria?" I asked.

"Well, they kept talking about Peoria all the time. Every time they did something they wanted to know if it would play in Peoria. So we figured that's probably where they went. But that's just a guess. They could have gone anywhere."

"Does anyone know why they moved?"

"Something to do with trouble in the government. The gossip we heard is that if he resigned, he'd be assured of a pension. But if he tried to stick it out, he'd be canned with nothing. So I guess he took the money and ran."

"Who moved into the house?"

"Family called the Fords. They're really nice people. Everyone seems to like them."

"What's he do for a living?" I asked Marty.

"He used to be a congressman, but now I think he's got some high job in the government, though you wouldn't know it to talk to him. He makes his own breakfast and he leaves the door open so anyone can talk to him. Those are his kids on the lawn there. His wife's a charmer. Used to be in show biz, I hear, but real down to earth. She cooks her own breakfast, too."

"It's good to have nice neighbors," I said.

"Nice isn't the word for it. Do you know the Fords hadn't moved in a week before they gave a dinner dance and invited everyone on the block to come?"

"No kidding?"

"Yup. And they say they're going to have blacks and women and poor people and everyone visit them."

"It's going to be tough to get a parking spot," I said.

"Everyone in the neighborhood is pleased as all get out to have such fine people move in. You never know who you're gonna get to live at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, and it could affect real estate values."

"Any other changes I should know about?" I asked Marty.

"The Ron Zieglers moved to California, and there's talk that Father McLaughlin is going to get a new parish somewhere. I hear the Pat Buchanans are leaving and also the Ken Clawsons.

"Jim St. Clair has gone back to Massachusetts to practice law and the Fred Buzhardts are also leaving town."

"Wow, it's been quite a summer. Anyone besides the Fords moving in that I should know about?"

"Oh yeah, a family named the Rockefellers from New York have just taken a house on Massachusetts Avenue."

"Damn," I said. "There goes the neighborhood."

Honeymoon Running Out? Labor Set To Break With Ford on Anti-Inflation Strategy

WASHINGTON — As an old Wolverine center, Jerry Ford has turned into a fine Saturday afternoon quarterback. But soon will come Monday morning. Say, by the end of the season -- the political season. Then he'd better wear his helmet.

The opposition -- labor chief George Meany, who says we're already in a 1930s-type depression, and the Democrats -- respectfully are letting him call the signals. Then they'll smash his economic line. Hard.

The opposition, for example, has gone along with the Council on Wage and Price Stability charade. They watched President Ford toss the ball to Congress when he could have run with it himself.

Mr. Ford has the executive power to set up such a council himself with a one-paragraph directive. He needn't have gone up the Hill. Its cost "is chicken-feed" according to one top labor chief. A million-dollar budget for a 25-man council staff.

But the togetherness theme after the Nixon Apocalypse is good. Further, some labor leaders and industry people know that when White House headhunters (talent scouts) were seeking staffers for the new council they positively asked specialists to recommend weaker men and women who wouldn't come on too strong and have it appear that Mr. Ford was on his way to political leprosy -- wage and price controls which many still believe are now absolutely essential.

Further, the insiders see the appointment of economic coordinator Ken Rush as council chairman as a signal that little will be done to keep wages and prices in line.

"Nixon's man Rush," says one insider "was thrown to the wolves instead of out the door. Rush has talked with Meany but he's helpless. He can't influence either big labor or big business."

Neither labor nor the harnessed industrial captains will tolerate guidelines of any kind. How can they until the national work force rank and file and interest rates are clapped under some controls?

Meany is considered moderate when he talks of labor's need for a 12 per cent annual wage increase. That's tiddlywinks compared with what's being won in the field. And to expect the wage and price council to handle it is much like Don Quixote trying to use the Washington monument as a lance.

Just look at what the West Coast construction unions have won these past few months for scores of thousands of craftsmen: The Northern California carpenters were making a cost package of $10.90 an hour. They got $1.72 an hour more for the first year of a three-year contract -- or a total of $12.62 an hour or $504.80 for a 40-hour week. And there are wage reopener clauses in the second and third years.

In Southern California the carpenters' previous wage rate was $9.44 an hour. In this year's new contract they won a $1.60 an hour more. Next year $1.45 an hour more. Third year, another dollar. Total $4.05 increase over a three-year pact -- or a jump of $162 a week more.

This is a total of $13.43 per hour -- before overtime.

Thus it runs. The story of the $108-a-day carpenter has already been recorded. There are equally high percentage gains for laborers in Northern California. Or in Washington (state). They were making $7 an hour. They've just gotten an additional $1.30 this year; minimum of another 95 cents next year and 90 cents the third year. This comes to at least a raise of $3.15 or a hike of $126 per man per week.

Now the cost of living escalator clauses are creeping into the construction trades. What does this do to contractors trying to bid on a major job? They have to jump their estimates. If they underrated the cost of living rise over a two- or three-year period they would go bankrupt.

With bread going for 60 and 75 cents a loaf and heading for a dollar, who can blame those who shout for cost of living increases in their new contracts. But what it does to inflation is still overlooked. The spread of the clause is fantastic. It now covers some 5 million workers. It has seeped into the garment industry and the municipal field for the first time on any significant basis.

Actually the only fields not yet covered are coal, oil and rubber. But the miners will get their cost of living clause this time. Wages then will spurt in these major industries. Who knows how much? Who knows how much higher the new energy costs will go?

The story is the same in a score of industries. This year the fuse has been lit by contract victories, for example, in the construction arena where wages and the fringers now have risen to 172.4 per cent over the 100 per cent of the 1967 base year.

So it will explode all over the nation during next year's massive collective bargaining.

There's no way to keep it all down without price controls or some food subsidies as they did in England and in some of the Iron Curtain nations.

Certainly there will be some special action in selective depressed fields, such as construction. But the White House will hold on to a tight-money policy. There will be unemployment -- perhaps well over five million. Labor won't sit still. Neither will the Democrats.

Jerry Ford will discover soon enough that it was easier playing the center for the Wolverines than for the White House.

JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN SAYS: Turkey Never Intended

WASHINGTON -- On July 30 in Geneva, the foreign ministers of Britain, Greece and Turkey solemnly affixed their signatures to a Cyprus cease-fire agreement. The British hailed it as "the first step on a long, hard road." To the Greeks, it represented "the starting point of a fair settlement."

As far as the Turks were concerned, it was apparently an act of hypocrisy. Not for a second, it appears, did Ankara intend to honor its word.

This is the message that emerges from a document we have obtained from highly placed diplomatic souces. It is entitled "Operation Order No. 1," and it lays out the plan of attack used by Turkish forces to capture Cypriot towns near Kyrenia.

It is dated July 30 -- the very day Turkey's foreign minister, Turan Gunes, signed the Geneva agreement. At the precise moment the Turks were declaring peace, in short, it appears they were secretly planning to attack.

Although the document came to us from reliable officials sources who accept it as genuine, there is no way we can completely vouch for its authenticity. We asked several experts at the State Dept. and Pentagon to examine it and give us an informed opinion. They timidly refused to even look at it.

We took it to the Turks and invited rebuttal. An embassy spokesman told my associate Joe Spear that he recognized the names of the Turkish officers listed in the operation order. And he acknowledged that the word "Kartal," used in the document, was the code name for Turkish operations in Cyprus. It means "eagle" in Turkish, he said.

The spokesman then declared that any further comment would be "impossible." The Turkish military, he said, "doesn't tell us anything."

The "mission," as laid out by the operations orders, reads:

"The 28th Division having the objective of extending and ensuring the security of the area occupied will attack on the 30th of July and occupy a line running from Hill 1023 West of Lapithos-Dassi-Sisklipos villages ..."

The Turkish attack actually began on July 31, not July 30. But the assault unfolded exactly as outlined in the plan.

"The 61st Infantry Regiment will move along the Road Sisklipos — and the Sisklipos valley east of the villages Krini-Agios Ermolaos, following the Commando Brigade which will cover the regiment.

"The armored battalion of the armored brigade, with the tanks landed in the region of Kyrenia, will move towards Platani village along the road Bogazi-Kyrenia-Agios Georgios. It will attach the three tanks of the 39th division ... The tanks of the tank battalion in the area of Krini together with the 230 Infantry Regiment will form a task force ...

"The amphibious regiment ... will ... occupy the Karavas Area and will reconnoit the enemy. The commando brigade will attack with its units situated in the area of Sisklipos and occupy the ridge southeast of the woods of Lapithos-Karavas.

"Towed and self-propelledartillery units ... will move into the area of Sisklipos pass and will support the encircling maneuver which will be conducted in Lapithos area ..."

The operations order also contains these instructions:

"American installations in the area of Karavas. They will not be destroyed and measures will be taken to secure life and property ...

"The units taking part in the attack will carry in their lorries food for 3 days. Movements during daylight will be effected in small parties and in such a way as not to be detected by the enemy. As long as the enemy does not fire we shall not fire either."

Just as the plans specify, within three days after gravely declaring in Geneva that they would "desist from all offensive or hostile activities," the Turks had captured four Cypriot towns, including both Lapithos and Karavas.

Around the world, the Turkish ceasefire violations were strongly denounced In Washington, however, there was curious apathy. On August 2, as the Turks were shelling Cypriot towns, State Dept. spokesman Robert Anderson was asked for an official reaction. "I am not persuaded that the ceasefire is in danger or has collapsed," he said.

BELL RINGER: "Ma Bell's" children are not content with their phone system monopolies. They want equipment monopolies, too.

Pacific Telephone, Bell System's gigantic California subsidiary, recently agreed to deliver Model 812 PBX switchboards at a reasonable price to Levi Strauss, Allstate Insurance and others. But once installation was underway, Pacific drastically jacked up the price.

As if this weren't enough, we have now learned that even as its salesmen were quoting the original low price, Pacific's management was estimating how much prices should be raised.

Pacific also assured the California Public Utilities Commission that the additional PBX costs would not "increase any rate or charge" to customers. Yet, at that same time, Pacific was telling customers that some rates would skyrocket.

At Pacific Telephone, a spokesman insisted that the price juggling had nothing to do with trying to underbid competition and then hiking prices once the customer was committed, a classic way of driving out competition. The spokesman insisted that the low price quotes were made only by a few "overzealous" salesmen and that the deals could be terminated without penalty.

But we have located at least one low-cost contract which was dated after Pacific had all the data it needed to predict a realistically higher price. Meanwhile, a consumer advocate, David Wilner, is suing Ma Bell's Pacific subsidiary to roll back the price.

Tax law change to be sought

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — State Revenue Department officials have said they intend to seek legislative action next year to change a portion of the state's tax laws that has cost Missouri more than $1 million annually in recent years.

Tax collection chief A. Gerald Reiss said Wednesday revision of the law that currently prohibits collection of sales tax on gasoline used for non-highway purposes will be part of the department's legislative recommendations, expected to be presented by early October.

The provision, upheld by the Missouri Supreme Court in the 1950s, calls for non-highway fuel users to pay the normal seven-cent-a-gallon road tax when they buy gasoline and then file for a refund of the tax afterwards. But the state cannot collect the 3 per cent sales tax on the fuel as it currently does in the case of diesel fuel used for non-highway purposes.

In 1973, alone, when about 127 million gallons of gasoline was used for non-highway purposes, the state lost an estimated $1.25 million in sales tax revenues. This year, with gasoline prices higher than in the past, officials estimate that loss to be over $2 million.

During a hearing earlier in the day before the joint legislative committee on energy resources, revenue chief James Spradling told the 10-member committee that his department was currently drafting new regulations aimed at tightening up diesel fuel reporting requirements.

Charges have been made in the past that users of diesel fuel have escaped paying the higher seven-cent-a-gallon road tax by claiming to use the fuel for non-highway purposes.

Although Spradling said he did not believe the "slippage" in collections of diesel fuel road tax was anywhere near $40 million as has been suggested, he acknowledged that his department doest not currently have an adequate system for determining how much of the diesel fuel is being used for over-the-road travel.

He said, however, he felt the tax law on special fuels such as diesel fuel could be tightened up by amending its provisions.

"I'm of the opinion now that there doesn't need to be a major overhaul," Spradling said. "I think there needs to be some changes and clarification in our tax laws on special fuels."

The committee was also told by John Denman, executive director of the Missouri Oil Council, that the only way to prevent losses in collection of the road tax on diesel fuel is through complete audits of the users.

His comments came in response to a proposal that the tax collection burden be placed on distributors of diesel fuel rather than on the users.

Arkansas men bound over on charge of possession

BENTON — Three Arkansas residents were bound over to appear in Circuit Court on Sept. 23 following a preliminary hearing in Magistrate Court Wednesday on a charge of possessing eight pounds of marijuana.

Martin Dudley Allen, 20, of Walnut Ridge, Ark., and Gary Dills, 22, and Danny Campbell, 24, of Hoxie, Ark., were arrested May 26 at Cape Girardeau Municipal Airport in extreme northern Scott County. The arrests came after Sheriff John Dennis received a tip from an unidentified person saying that the men would be on a plane landing at the airport with approximately eight pounds of marijuana in their possession.

The men were apprehended when they attempted to get back on the plane.

Judge Lloyd Briggs deferred sentencing for one year against Richard Wayne Davis, 19, of Rock Springs, Wyo., and Albert Samuel Purser, 21, of New Madrid on a possession of marijuana charge.

Davis and Purser were arrested Tuesday night after highway patrolmen Ron Ryan and Mike Robertson stopped their car on Cambridge Drive in Sikeston.

Wayne Gibson, 19, of Rock Springs and Rouget Gerard DeLisle, 17, of Portageville, also arrested by the patrolmen for possession of marijuana, were granted a continuance of cases until Sept. 11.

Claude Slayton of Chaffee was sentenced to nine months in the county jail after he pleaded guilty to assaulting Wanda Slayton on Aug. 27.

An attorney was appointed to defend Norman Travis on a Dec. 20, 1972 charge of stealing personal property belonging to City Cab Co. of Sikeston.

After waiving his preliminary hearing, Ron Woodruff of St. Louis was bound over to appear in Circuit Court on Sept. 12. Woodruff is charged with writing a $126.50 bad check on Oct. 19 to Jack Frost Discount in Sikeston.

After pleading not guilty to an Aug. 10 charge of tampering with a motor vehicle, an attorney was appointed to defend Larry Eugene Berry of Scott City.

Fined for speeding were: Randall Floyd Brown of Scott City, $125; Marguin Bishop of Chaffee, $15; Daniel George Lankheit of St. Louis, $19; Guy Thomas Schwab of Cape Girardeau, $15; Burleigh Eudean Spitler of Sikeston, $11; Joan Henderson of Charleston, $15; and Carol Sue Carney of Dexter, $15.

Allen Louis Howard of Sikeston was fined $15 after he pleaded guilty to an improper vehicle registration charge, and Troy Lee Ward of Sikeston was fined $25 after he pleaded guilty to a charge of driving without a valid operator's license.

Candidates to be told of Junior Miss pageant

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Tri- County Junior Miss candidates and their parents will be guests during a special meeting at 7 p.m. Wednesday at Southeast Missouri Hospital.

Highlight of the meeting for all high school senior girls interested in the local pageant will be the showing of a 28- minute pageant film titled, "Be Yourself". The movie tells the Junior Miss story and captures much of the fun, adventure and beauty of the festivities.

The Tri- County Junior Miss pageant is scheduled Oct. 12 under the sponsorship of the Cape Girardeau Jaycees. The special meeting on Sept. 11 was arranged to familiarize candidates and eligible high school seniors with Junior Miss standards, goals and procedures.

The three girls chosen as Bollinger, Cape Girardeau and Scott County Junior Misses on Oct. 12 will represent the counties in the state pageant Feb. 1 at St. Louis.

Local prizes include a scholarship to Southeast Missouri State University or to a college of the winning entrant's choice.

"Any local girl, 16 through 18, and a senior in high school is eligible to take part in the pageant," Pat Bucek, chairman of the Tri-County pageant, said.

"It should be pointed out, however, there are rigid standards for the winner. The Junior Miss program is not a beauty contest. Mental alertness, scholastic achievement and creative talent, as well as poise and appearance and youth fitness are considered by pageant judges," he added.

Ann Landers

Ann won't back 'Kid's Lib'

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing to tell you about a new group that I am trying to start. It is called Kid's Lib.

We want the right to express ourselves without being told we are too young to know anything. We also want the right to smoke and drink if we want to at age 13.

I saw a man on TV the other night who gave me this idea and a lot of my friends think it's neat. He said kids at age 13 should be able to handle their own money, choose their own clothes and pick which parent they want to live with if there's a divorce.

Will you back me up? -- A Kid Who Wants To Be Liberated

Dear Kid: No way. You are adding apples and oranges and getting bull- feathers. I agree a 13- year- old should be able to express his opinions, pick his own friends and handle his own money (an allowance, in most cases), and the judge often will allow a 13- year- old to decide which parent he wants to live with. All those things are reasonable, but the crock about 13- year- olds being allowed to smoke and drink is strictly for the birds -- the loons, that is. Forget it, Buster.

Dear Ann Landers: A letter that appeared in your column a few days ago could have been written by me -- same number of children, married same number of years, and the same problem.

To outsiders we appeared to have the perfect marriage -- and it was a very good one, except when it came to sex. I disliked intercourse, avoided it when I could and tolerated it whan I had to.

The inevitable happened. Some little tramp in his office threw herself at him. The day he told me I didn't have to be bothered with sex any longer because he had a good substitute, I nearly died.

I went to my doctor and asked for his help. He recommended that I "psyche myself out" and suggest two books that ten years ago would have been banned as pornography.

Well, Ann, his advice saved my marriage. I decided to be the aggressor, something I had never done before, then I utilized what I had read in the books. My husband was amazed. And so was I. For the first time I enjoyed sex. We have developed a marvelous bedroom relationship and the tramp is nowhere in sight.

I now know I was frigid because I was ignorant (and Puritanical), but all that is over. I'm happier today than I've ever been in my life. Please print this letter if you think it will help someone else, Ann. -- Enlightened Wife

Dear Wife: I do and I will. Here it is.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm having an argument with my husband about the violence on TV and what it is doing to the minds of our young children. I am also against his buying toy guns for our grandchildren. He says I'm a crackpot, that the violence on TV is a good outlet for young children and guns are a apart of our American heritage. He also claims play gun- fighting is a healthy way for kids to express anger. Where do you stand? -- Unresolved In Royal Oak

Dear Un: I agree with you wholeheartedly on the toy gun issue, but I don't buy the theory that either toy guns or violence on TV will make killers out of normal, healthy children. The trouble goes back much further. I believe constructive and informative TV shows are much better for children -- and adults -- than a steady diet of bludgeoning, shooting and blood all over the place. Such exposure cannot help but make the steady, long-time viewer insensitive to killing. Since the airwaves belong to everyone, we should insist that the TV and radio network people elevate the quality of the material offered to the public.

Is alcoholism ruining your life? Know the danger signals and what to do. Read the booklet, "Alcoholism -- Hope and Help," by Ann Landers. Enclose 35 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self- addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 3346, Chicago, Illinois 60654.

Home-canned poison is worse than cobra venom

COLUMBIA — A mid-Missouri housewife was lucky no one wanted to taste her home-canned stringbeans.

It isn't fair to mention her name. In the end, she did the right thing. But someone could have died.

The lady was smart enough to notice that the beans "just didn't look right." She called her extension home economist. And the specialist brought it to the University of Missouri-Columbia.

"I took one look, and it made me sick!" exclaimed Dr. D. M. Graham, chairman of the UMC department of food science and nutrition.

"We found the same type of bacteria in those beans that cause botulism.

"One taste of that stuff would kill you. Ounce for ounce, it's worse than cobra venom! One teaspoon of the toxin will kill a million people."

Graham told the story because 10 to 15 people die each year from food poisoning they get from home canning. That compares with only two or three cases of food poisoning deaths in the last 50 years that have resulted from faulty commercial food processing.

And millions of dollars of good food is wasted each year because it is improperly canned or stored.

"Understanding the shelf life of good food can really save you money," exclaimed Graham. "If you buy a dozen cans and end up throwing half of them away, you double your cost.

"If you buy a gallon of milk and throw out two cups, you've increased your cost 15 per cent. If you have to throw away four slices out of every pound of bread, you've increased your cost by 20 per cent.

"That's also why you shouldn't waste food at the table and why you should wrap the unused portions well before putting them back in the refrigerator."

Dr. Graham, in addition to his UMC responsibilities, acts as regional communicator for the Institute of Food Technologists (IFT), a group of 10,000 food scientists concerned about rising food costs and the effect of shelf life on these costs.

A recent IFT report underlined the importance of keeping food dry and cool.

"At warm room temperatures," said the report, "bacteria multiply rapidly. Under ideal conditions, their numbers may double every 20 minutes. At this rate, a single bacterium could produce a colony of over two million bacteria within seven hours!"

Graham explained that foods lose quality as chemical reactions take place. Rates of simple chemical reactions double as the temperature rises 18 degrees Farenheit (10 degrees Centigrade). Reactions in food products can increase four to seven times as fast, because the chemical reactions are more complex and are speeded up by enzymes.

"The most sensitive example I can think of is canned sour cream," said Graham. "It'll turn brown, separate and it's texture will get 'rough' in a very short time if it's not properly stored.

"On the other end of the scale would be something like a can of peas. This is simply a food stored in its own juice and water. Still, it will lose color and flavor twice as fast with each 18-degree increase in temperature."

Graham tells consumers not to confuse spoilage with loss of quality. The change that occurs is not necessarily harmful (as is the case with botulism), but the food can lose color, flavor or texture.

"It also loses nutritive value," said Graham. "A good indicator is the food's color. Nutritive loss occurs at about the same rate as color loss."

The UMC food scientist warns consumers to follow canning directions very carefully. In the case of the home-canned beans, the lady had used the lid of a peanut butter jar instead of a canning ring, so the jar wasn't properly sealed.

He advised consumers to watch for cans that are puffed, dented on the seams or rusted on the seams. This is an indication that something may have leaked into the can, carrying bacteria inside it.

"If the ends are puffed up," said Graham, "something is growing in the can that produces gas. That could be botulism."

Graham said mortality among those eating food containing botulism is over 50 per cent. There's a bank of anti-serum in Atlanta, but you need to know within a few hours where the food poisoning came from and what type it is.

"If you should eat some poisoned food," said Graham, "your best hope is that you didn' eat all of it and that you have some left so the doctors know what to do."

The IFT report told how a consumer can increase shelf life of food products after they're brought home by maintaining cool, dry storage conditions, rotating food products in order to user the older products first, checking the labels for any special instructions and buying only what can be used within reasonable time.

Graham concurred. And he had this final advice for home canners:

"Make sure that jars are sealed tight. You want to hear a high pitched 'ping' when you tap the top to show that the vacuum is good."

The items will be taken to the SeMo Fair in Cape Girardeau for exhibit, then later to the Delta Fair in Kennett, where premium money will be presented on each exhibit.

John Watkins. . .Mr. Softball

By BILL HARRISON

Who is John Watkins? Well, every softball fan in the state of Missouri, the entire mid-west and possibly the whole United States know who John is.

John Watkins' name is synonymous with softball. When you hear the name, softball immediately comes to the mind.

John Watkins is a softball pitcher par excellence. He's the Bob Gibson and Sandy Koufax of softball and if the sport had the national attention that baseball has, he would surely be destined for the hall of fame.

John is 39 years old and was born and raised on a farm outside Vanduser. He played softball for Vanduser high school and was the team's centerfielder and leading hitter. John never attempted to pitch a softball until his senior year.

"I was pretty wild but we won the high school championship in 1953." John pitched for Bill Puckett's Stags in 1954 and won the state softball championship. John has been pitching softball for 21 years and has pitched in state tournaments for 20 straight years for one team or another.

John just got back from Springfield where the Mid- Western regional softball tournament was held. He pitched for the state champion Jefferson City Rippeto Mouses. John won the only two games that Rippeto won in the tournament.

"I think if I had pitched in the first game we would have won the tournament. We scored five runs," John commented.

John beat Lincoln, Nebraska 2-1, allowed only two hits, struckout 13 and drove in the winning two runs in the top of the seventh. He came back in the second night against Demoines, Iowa and shut them out on a one-hitter 2-0.

John was ineligible to participate in the national tournament due to the fact that the team he was on won the state tournament.

John has pitched on eight state championship teams and has been on 12 mid-western regional teams and participated in four national tournaments in his 21 years of pitching.

John is ranked in the top three softball pitchers in the mid-west.

John has some of the most impressive credentials a pitcher can possess. He has averaged at least 50 wins a season for the past 20 years. This season's slate was 57-2. His earned run average for the past 20 years is .001.

John can't remember the number of no-hitters he has twirled. He fanned all 21 batters in a game at Kennett in 1971. This feat was performed with some regularity in his prime. He has averaged at least 15 strikeouts per game in his 21 year career.

"A rise ball has been my bread and butter pitch all the way up to the last five years," John said. "I've changed my tactics the past five years due to the fact of age because I can't throw as hard as long. I throw the rise and change drop," John continued. "I have as good a changeup drop as there is," he stated.

Softball is not the only game John is or was good at. He was a fine baseball hitter and had an excellent arm from the outfield position.

In 1954 John was offered a $10,000 bonus to play for then Milwaukee Braves but failed to sign for personal reasons. The Cardinals offered him a contract to play for their Columbus, Georgia team but he was drafted into the army and was unable to report.

John played one year for Murray State University as a freshman in 1956 and led the Racers to the OVC championship with a .376 batting average.

"With all the pitching I have done and am noted for, I pride myself in my hitting more than pitching." John said.

"I play softball because I enjoy it," John said. "The reason I travel over the country is because they won't let me play in Sikeston. Sikeston needs some sponsors and participation," John emphasized.

John has pitched in national softball tournaments in Clearwater, Fla., Newark, N.J., Indianapolis, Ind., and Springfield, Mo. He averages pitching in five games a weekend when the season is in full swing. At 39 and after pitching in over a 1,000 games in the past 20 years, John says that his arm is sound as ever. "I have had some trouble with my knees," he said. "If my legs hold out I should pitch for another five years. I use my head more than I used to. I don't throw as hard now," John continued.

"My biggest thrill in the 21 years that I have been pitching was in 1971 while pitching for Springfield in the National tournament at Springfield. We won third place that year. I came in to pitch in relief and hurled six innings of no-hit ball and when I came up to bat in the top of the seventh inning the partisan crowd gave me a standing ovation for about five minutes and goose pimples began to pop out on my arms," John said, "I'll never forget that."

KANSAS CITY (AP) — It's Oklahoma again in the Big Eight Conference and Nebraska second.

This was the way sports writers and sportscasters voted Wednesday at the conclusion of their annual skywriters tour of conference football practice camps.

Oklahoma, given 33½ firstplace votes among 36 cast, was selected as the team most likely to win the league championship. The nationally first-ranked Sooners piled up 286 points in the balloting on a basis of eight points for first, seven for second, etc.

Nebraska received the other 2½ first-place votes and 250 points. Missouri was third with 206 points, Colorado fourth with 157, Kansas fifth with 149, Oklahoma State sixth with 112, Iowa State seventh with 83 and Kansas State last with 61.

Oklahoma halfback Joe Washington, a sophomore, was voted the player expected to be the offensive star of the year. He received 26 votes for first place. Quarterback Dave Humm of Nebraska got five, tailback Mike Strachan of Iowa State two and Tony Davis of Nebraska, Steve Davis of Oklahoma and Dave Logan of Colorado one each.

Rod Shoate, Oklahoma linebacker, was named the top defensive player, receiving 22 votes. Oklahoma's Selmon brothers, tackles Dewey and LeRoy, each collected five and Mark Johnson, Missouri tackle, three. Scott Pickens of Missouri, Randy Hughes of Oklahoma and Andre Roundtree of Iowa State each picked up one vote.

Terry Miller, freshman halfback at Oklahoma State, was voted the most promising newcomer on offense and got 13 votes. Only players who have never lettered were considered. Elvis Peacock of Oklahoma had nine votes, Steve Pisarkiewicz of Missouri eight and Bbobby Thomas of Nebraska three.

Iowa State noseguard Jimmy Potter topped the voting for defensive newcomer with 20 votes. Mike Fultz of Nebraska got three and four others each received one vote, Dave Butterfield of Nebraska, Jody Farthing of Oklahoma, Vic Chandler and kicker Dave Chavez, both of Kansas State.

NEW YORK (AP) — Four schools, Boston College, Brown, Cornell and St. Lawrence, have been invited to compete in the 13th annual Eastern College Athletic Conference Hockey Festival, it was announced today by Scotty Whitelaw, commissioner of the ECAC.

The festival will be held at Madison Square Garden with doubleheaders on Friday, Jan. 3 and Sunday, Jan. 5.

Cards obtain Ron Hunt

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Veteran second baseman Ron Hunt was acquired on waivers by the St. Louis Cardinals Wednesday night from the Montreal Expos.

Cardinal officials said the acquisition of the 33-year-old infielder, which followed St. Louis' 5-4 win over the Expos, was expected to add both depth and experience to the team in the waning weeks of the season.

Hunt had batted .268 in 115 games for the Expos this season after posting a career high of 309 in 1973. In 12 seasons with the New York Metsl, Los Angeles Dodgers, San Francisco Giants and Expos he has compiled a lifetime mark of .274.

The scrappy infielder owns nearly every major league record for being hit by pitches. He established a season mark in 1971 when he was struck 50 times and has been hit 241 times during his career, also a major league record. He has been hit 14 times this year.

A native of St. Louis, Hunt was the National League's All Star second baseman in 1964 and 1966.

NEW YORK (AP) — This was back in May, with the college football season still five months away. Notre Dame's Ara Parseghian, coach of the 1973 national champions, was asked the following question:

"Do you remember what happened the last time a team coached by Pepper Rodgers opened against a defending national champion?"

Parseghian's answer:

"My memory's not that bad."

For those whose memories are that bad, what happened was that in the 1972 opener Rodgers' UCLA team ended Nebraska's dream of an unprecedented third consecutive national crown with a 20-17 upset after the Cornhuskers had won 23 games in a row and had a 32- game unbeaten string.

Rodgers has come home to Georgia Tech and on Monday night he gets a chance to upend another national champion when the Yellow Jackets entertain Notre Dame before a nationwide television audience ABC-TV, 9 p.m., EDT.

Says Parseghian: "It's an old cliche, but in our case it was never more true, that it is far more difficult staying on top than it is getting there in the first place. But little did we dream that between the conclusion of spring practive and the start of fall drills our problems would be compounded almost to an unbelievable degree."

Parseghian was referring to the loss of 10 players he expected back, eight of whom were counted on to play key roles this season.

Says Rodgers: "Notre Dame's losing those players is like the man with $10 million who lost $1 million ... he still has $9 million left."

Will the Rodgers lightning strike another national champion? It says here Notre Dame will rub salt in Pepper's wounds ... 35-14.

Last year's picks produced a final tally of 521 right and 189 wrong with 17 ties for a .734 percentage. The bowl count was 8-3, including Notre Dame's 24-23 Sugar Bowl victory over Alabama, which was forecast here as a 27-24 game.

UCLA at Tennessee: Next year, UCLA plays Tennessee in Los Angeles. This year, it's Knoxville,) Big Orange

Houston at Arizona State: The winner of this one just might go unbeaten the rest of the way, too. If you like a dark horse for the national championship try ... Houston 33-14.

Eastern Michigan at Miami, Ohio: Miami's 12-game winning streak ties Penn State for the longest such skein in the country. No unlucky number this time ... Miami 17-7.

Mississippi at Tulane: The Green Wave may be a tidal wave ... Tulane 28-7.

North Carolina State at Wake Forest: Pity the poor Deacons. They open with the defending Atlantic Coast champs and in October they face Oklahoma, Penn State and Maryland in consecutive weeks and all on the road. N. C. State 35-7.

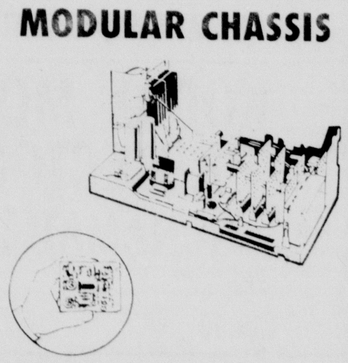

Oregon State at Syracuse: Linus, alias new Syracuse Coach Frank Maloney, finally finds the Great Pumpkin, alias Oregon State's Dee Andros. Syracuse 21-20.

Dexter Ace

DEXTER — Would you believe that Mrs. Marilyn Agey of Dexter sunk a hole- in - one on the fourth hole of the Stoddard County Country Club golf course Friday afternoon?

Well, she did and that before seven witnesses. You might say that that was a pretty good feat and it was. But, did you know that her son, David Agey, of Dexter has performed the same feat three times previously on the same hole.

Big Red releases star

ST. LOUIS (AP) Two-time collegiate track All America Fred DeBernardi was released by the St. Louis Cardinals Wednesday, the National Football League team announced.

DeBernardi, 25, was signed by the Cardinals as a defensive end last winter, but had seen little action.

DeBernardi, 6-foot-6, 250, was originally an 11th-round draft choice of the Baltimore Colts in 1972 and had tried out again for the Colts and New England Patriots last season, but spent most of the year on the pro track tour.

The Santa Monica, Calif., native played little football in college.

Cards bullpen to the rescue

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Al Hrabosky, who is known as the "Mad Hungarian," insists the St. Louis Cardinals' bullpen will carry them to a National League division title.

And the Montreal Expos, the latest victims of Hrabosky's blazing fast balls, were in no position to argue the stocky left-hander's case Wednesday night.

Rich Folkers first came to the rescue after Mike Jorgensen's two-run homer powered the Expos to an early 3-0 lead.

He finally yielded an eighth-inning run, then the hardthrowing Hrabosky locked up the Cards' fourth straight, 5-4, with a two-strikeout ninth inning.

"The thing is we're all rested," maintained the dark-haired, mustachioed Hrabosky of a Cardinals relief corps which includes himself, Folkers and right-hander Mike Garman.

"We're the youngest bullpen in the league," he added, "and nobody's afraid to go out there and throw strikes.

"The Pittsburgh Pirates have Dave Giusti and they've got Ramon Hernandez, which is a great combination. But the big thing is they've been off and on. I've said all year the bullpen is going to be the big factor."

After the Expos climbed on Cards starter Alan Foster, the stylish Folkers demonstrated the whereof Hrabosky spoke.

He fanned seven Expos and issued no hits through 4 2-3 innings until Willie Davis drilled a two-out single to left in the eighth.

Jorgensen followed with a double that scored Davis and produced a 4-4 tie, but pinchhitter Jim Dwyer's single chased home Bake McBride for the Cards in the bottom of the inning.

Folkers' triumph lifted his record to 6-1, and the save was the seventh for Hrabosky.

Garman, the Cards' winner in a game Tuesday night, stands 6-2 with five saves, Hrabosky is 6-1 and the three relievers combined at 11-0 since the All-Star game.

"It isn't a one-month thing either," mentioned Folkers. "Everybody's been doing the job all year."

St. Louis' victory, minus a stolen base by the speedy Lou Brock, was the Cards' fourth in a row and left them 1½ games behind the idle Pirates in the NL East.

"Winning's what it's all about anyway," said Brock, who went 1-for-5 and had no chance to try for his 100th theft.

"How you win is a matter of putting so many ingredients together—pitching, defense, hitting. It's certainly not just a matter of base-stealing."

Yanks red hot

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The New York Yankees are red hot. The Boston Red Sox are red-faced.

Their individual predicaments have given some color to the American League East race.

The Yankees won their 16th game in 20 Wednesday with a 3-0 decision over the Milwaukee Brewers and climbed into a first-place tie with failing Boston in the East.

The embarrassed Red Sox made the tie possible by losing a 6-0 decision to the Baltimore Orioles, their sixth straight loss and their ninth in the last 11 games.

The win moved the third-place Orioles within two games of the top.

Baltimore's suddenly revitalized pitching staff not only beat the Red Sox in their threegame series — they humiliated them with consecutive shutouts.

In the other American League games, the Cleveland Indians stopped the Detroit Tigers 5-4; the Chicago White Sox trimmed the Kansas City Royals 7-0; the California Angels defeated the Oakland A's 5-2 and the Texas Rangers trimmed the Minnesota Twins 1-0.

Jim Palmer and Earl Willams combined to pace Baltimore's victory over the stumbling Red Sox.

Palmer, back on the active roster less than a month after 54 days on the disabled list, hurled a three-hitter. Williams, who has hit eight of his 13 home runs since Aug. 1, clubbed two solo homers and drove in three runs.

Yankees 3, Brewers 0

George "Doc" Medich pitched a five-hitter and retired 15 straight batters at one point to pace New York's victory. Lou Piniella doubled home the first of two runs in the first inning as the Yankees beat nemesis Kevin Kobel.

Indians 5, Tigers 4

Pinch-hitter Rico Carty's runscoring single in the eighth inning off Detroit relief ace John Hiller carried Cleveland past Detroit. With the score tied at 4-4, John Ellis led off the eighth with a single off Hiller, 16-10.

After Jack Brohamer hit into a forceout, Buddy Bell laced a single to third, Brohamer taking third. Carty then batted for Tom McCraw and singled to left, bringing home Brohamer with the winning run.

White Sox 7, Royals 0

Jim Kaat fired a four-hitter and the Chicago White Sox erupted for six runs and seven hits in the fifth inning to beat Kansas City. Paul Splittorff was the loser.

Angels 5, A's 2

Bob Oliver drove in two runs with a double and single to lead California over Oakland. Oliver doubled to drive in Bobby Valentine and then scored himself as the Angels scored twice off losing pitcher Vida Blue in the second inning.

Rangers 1, Twins 0

Ferguson Jenkins blanked Minnesota on seven hits for his 21st win and sixth shutout of the season, pitching Texas over the Twins.

National League scores: New York 4, Chicago 2; Atlanta 5, San Diego 3; St. Louis 5, Montreal 4; Cincinnati 2, Houston 1 and Los Angeles 6, San Francisco 3 in 11 innings.

Phone bill warning issued

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The chairman of the Missouri House Accounts Committee has warned state representatives to bring their long-distance telephone bills in line with the committee's $75 a month policy or face losing their telephone credit cards.

"I'm not raising hell, I just want to tighten up on some of these phone bills," said Rep. Fred DeField, D-Charleston, after meeting with the committee Tuesday.

"When you get up around several hundred dollars, it's kind of ridiculous. If they don't (cut back on expenses), next month we're going to start pulling some of these telephone cards."

According to records of the House administrator, the average monthly long distance telephone bill for all 163 House members ranges between $6,000 and $9,000, and DeField pointed out that most of the House members keep the monthly expense to well below $100.

While less than a dozen representatives have had bills of more than $100 a month this summer, the records that some were very high, led by Reps. Harold Martin, D-St. Louis, and Joseph Fendler, R-St. Louis, who both had monthly bills of more than $400.

Some of those with high bills told the committee that they believe other persons were making the calls and charging them to the House credit cards and DeField said some card numbers may be changed to prevent that problem in the future.

"We don't want somebody using these phone cards who is not authorized to use them," he commented, "and we think that may be happening."

DeField said those with the highest telephone bills were notified in July that they should cut back on phone costs while all members of the House were sent a letter Aug. 23 asking them to keep their phone expenses down.

Council to oversee grant expenditures

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The effects of state reorganization continued even two months after it was implemented as a new council has been formed to oversee the expenditure of federal grants awarded to Missouri by the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration.

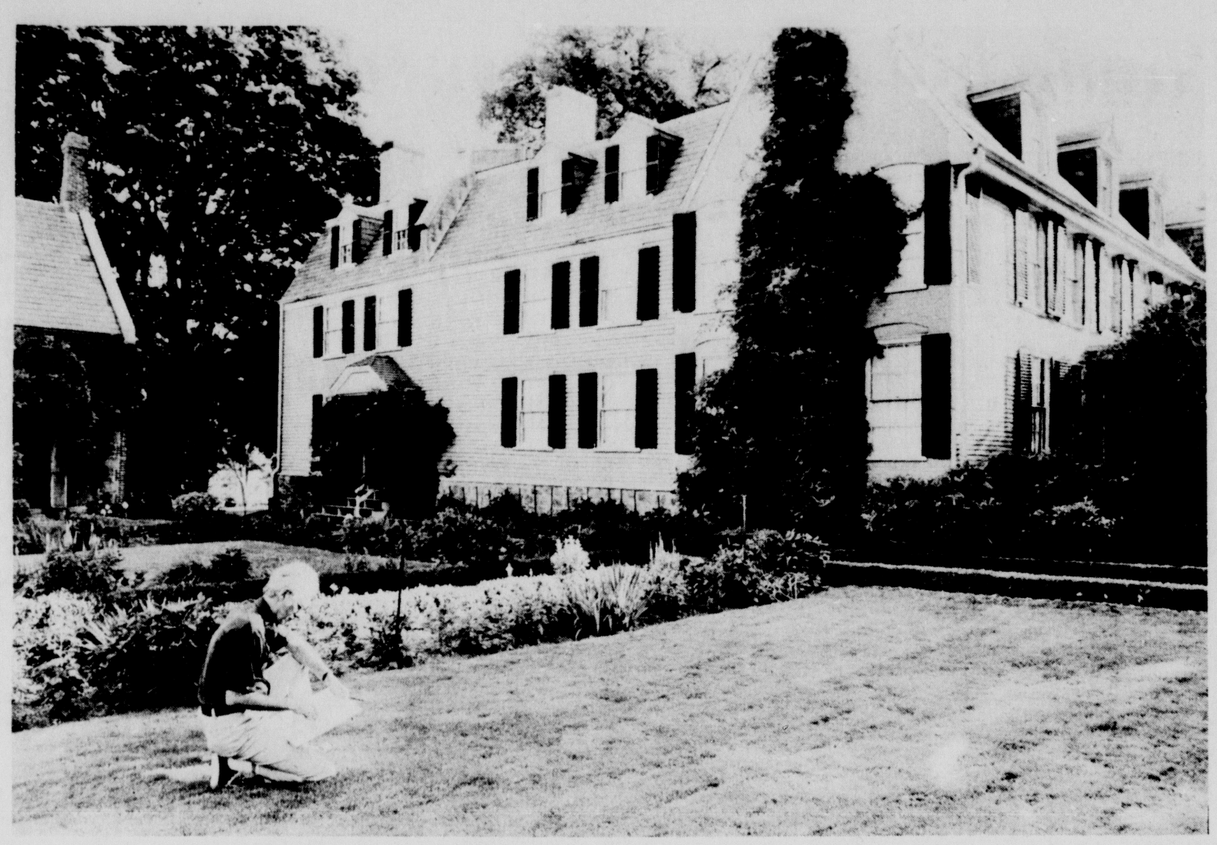

State Public Safety Chief Mike Garrett said Tuesday the new Missouri Council on Criminal Justice, headed by Kansas City attorney Gene Voights, will replace the Missouri Law Enforcement Assistance Council, which was abolished under reorganization.

Garrett also announced that a special task force within the new council will review management of the new agency, which is responsible for developing statewide criminal justice plans and monitoring the expenditure of the anticrime funds.

The new council members are: State Supreme Court Judge James A. Finch, St. Louis Appellate Judge Joseph Simeone, State Prison Chief George Camp, State Probation and Parole Head W. R. Vermillion, Highway Patrol Supt. Sam Smith.

State Sen. William J. Esely, R-Bethany, Pettis County Sheriff Emmett Fairfax, Kansas City Police Chief Joseph D. McNamara, Alexander Netchvolodoff of the attorney general's office, Columbia Newspaper Publisher Henry Waters.

Howard F. Baer of St. Louis, John C. Brackman of Union, Clarence Breazeal of Trenton, Richard Dunn of St. James, Don Hancock of Doniphan, Robert Wiley of Crane, Margaret Bush Wilson of St. Louis and John Koffman of Moberly.

Home of great significance

The Adams House, Quincy, Mass., the nation's only private residence to house two Presidents, is one of 22 historic homes deemed of greatest significance to the U. S. Bicentennial in a survey conducted by Ridge Homes, of Conshohocken, Pa. John Adams called it "Peacefield," but to later generations of Adamses it was known simply as "the Old House." The home was the Adams homestead 1788-1927, and is now administered by the National Park Service.

Parents share responsibility for learning with educators

JEFFERSON CITY — The 1974-75 school year has begun and more than 1,065,000 children and young people will attend Missouri public schools, according to Arthur L. Mallory, state commissioner of education.

Each student represents a home with great ambitions and expectations for its children and youth. The school year itself presents a significant responsibility for the teacher, who must make every effort to assure a successful school year for the student. Parents share with the teacher the responsibility for providing a successful experience for the youngster.

For parents, one of the most important activities on any school day morning is getting the student ready to attend school. Readiness means not only that the child or young person will begin the school day with a nourishing meal and looking as well groomed as possible, but it also means that the student will have a positive attitude about school, about his classmates and about himself.

Attitude, unquestionably, is one of the most important of all human forces. When the attitude is strong and positive, when it is in harmony with the best ideals, few genuine, worthwhile things are beyond reach. When the attitude is troubled and undernourished, life seems hardly worth the effort.

The matter of attitude is where the parent can be without peer. Concern, strength, love and positive attitude can perform miracles with a student, whereas the teachers must support and assist. Lethargy and apathy begin at home; so does a wholesome and positive attitude.

One of the most isgnificant things that a parents can do is to help his youngster develop an attitude which will help him feel good about himself, build confidence in what he's doing and cause him to be willing to explore, cooperate, share and to be enthusiastic about what life has to offer, Mallroy stated.

"If you and I as parents (Joann and I have four teen-agers in our home -- one in college and three in high school) would like to guarantee as much as possible that our children will have a good school year," Mallory said, "we can keep the following in mind:

"Become personally involved in the school program. Visit the school and talk with teachers and the principal. Offer to be of assistance when we can. This display of genuine interest and a positive attitude toward school will be an encouragement to the students in our homes.

"Find some time, at least weekly, to talk with our children about their educational programs and their studies. It is helpful from time to time for an entire family to sit down and discuss what the youngsters are concerned about at school. Find ways to encourage our children in their school activities. Encouragement and judicious praise are among life's greatest motivators.

"When our children are having difficulty with their school work, we should go directly to someone who will assist. Often this is the teacher; somethimes it is the principal or the guidance counselor. But always it should be someone who cares about them and who will be willing to assist.

Rough roads slow farm traffic

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Rough country roads and rickety bridges are slowing farm traffic to the market and result in inflationary food prices, says a research report released by an organization sponsored by road builders and other highway construction groups.

The Road Information Program (TRIP) said in its report today that about 20 per cent of the state's 100,158 miles of rural roads are deficient and should be resurfaced. The report also said that one-fourth of the state's rural bridges, or 5,085 of them, are substandard and should be replaced or repaired.

"Every time city shoppers pass a supermarket checkout stand, they pay extra for slow, costly farm-to-market trucking over bad country roads and bridges," said William Clarkson of Kansas City, the Missouri TRIP chairman.

Clarkson said the Missouri State Highway Commission and other road agencies were making a major effort to upgrade rural roads but are hampered by a lack of money. TRIP estimated it would cost $875 million to repair rural roads. There was no estimate of the cost for bridge repairs.

The report said increased production of cattle, soybeans and hogs resulted in 10,201 more truckloads of farm-to-market shipments in 1972 than in 1968, and traffic on rural roads increased 25 per cent in the past five years. TRIP estimated rural traffic would jump 45 per cent in the next 15 years.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Letter to the Editor:

My name is Anna May Bentley Scott and I am asking for your help.

I lost contact with my father, Ed Bentley and/or Ed Russell, in 1966 and I understand he passed away on December 10, 1970. (I just found out this August 1, 1974) I was his one and only child.

I would like to know where my father passed away at and where his burial was, where his last place of residence was and if there was any living relatives. Since I was an only child, his personal belongings would mean a lot to me too.

Maybe some of the following information would help, if someone knew my father. My father, Ed Bentley and/or Russell, was born in Dent County Missouri near Salem, Mo. in 1891. His last known address that I have was Rolands, Missouri. His father, my grandfather, was Chris Bentley. My grandmothers name was Susan Maher and after Chris Bentley was deceased, Susan Maher married a man name Russell. I believe she had two (2) girls during this marriage. I also believe these girls lived in St. Louis, Mo. My father had a cousin name Will Schafer, now deceased, who lived in Bunker, Missouri, just out side of Salem.

I feel if this were published, someone may see it and possibly have some information which will help me. I want to know where my father was deceased, where his personal belongings are and if I have any living relatives.

I sincerely appreciate all the help you can be to me in this matter.

Sincereily

Dear Editor:

We certainly would like to take this means to thank your paper on helping to publicize the presentation of the Fetal Monitor System to the Missouri Delta Community.

This certainly was a splendid manner in informing the public of the availability and use of this fine piece of equipment not only to patients in labor at our local hospital but to patients requiring this specialized service in surrounding hospitals not having this equipment.

We certainly want to thank also the people who worked to secure this equipment and to the many many people who either by donation to the March of Dimes Fund sponsored by the Daughters of Isabella or to the Tootsie Roll Sales for the Mental Retardation Program of the Knights of Columbus who made the purchase of this equipment possible.

Also a big thanks to the Kiwanis Club of Sikeston, th First National Bank, Secu Federal Savings & Loan, an Security National Bank and those individuals who made a direct contribution to this equipment.

Dr. Leandro Cejas and other doctors and the hospital are certainly proud to have a piece of equipment to help save lives of the newborn, in addition, to help prevent mental retardation caused at birth.

We are proud to have been a part of this wonderful project.

Mr. Charles L. Blanton III
Sikeston Daily Standard
Sikeston, Missouri

Dear Mr. Blanton:

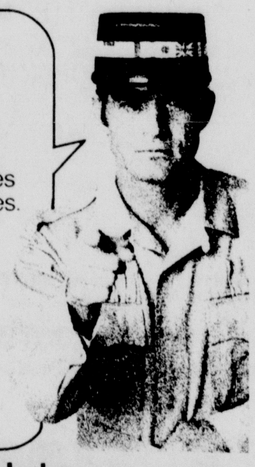

Your East Prairie reporter had a story in the Standard I believe it was last Friday night that contained a statement I would like to make a statement on. It was concerning the resignation of our City Manager Mr. Robert Kakac and she made what I assume was a direct quote from Mr. Kakac but considering her slanted reporting of our council meetings I wouldn't know if it was her opinion or his, and could care less.

The statement was, in effect the City Council constantly berated all City employees except one and Mr. Kakac won't tell me who the one perfect one we have is and since it is Council's opinion we have many many fine city employees may I ask you to print just this paragraph.

Reference is made to the statement in the Friday night issue of the Daily Standard in which the City Manager of East Prairie who will be leaving soon made the statement the City Council constantly berated all City Employes except one. As Mayor of East Prairie and I believe I speak for the entire Council I simply want to say we have many many fine City employees, some of whom have worked for the City for as many as ten to fifteen years. We have employees in every department whom we consider to be above average in their work and their dedication and loyalty to the City .. from the Police Department all the way to the administrative employees, the Clerk and Collector in City Hall. In every department we have some fine employees and are proud of them. It was not necessary to repudiate Mr. Kakac's statement in East Prairie, our local people know the situation, but to the towns surrounding East Prairie we simply want to say .. we have a great many of fine employees and are proud of them.

Yours truly,
LaWanda Douglas, Mayor

Advance sailor in Athens promotes understanding

ATHENS, Greece -- Racial harmony is a necessity for maximum effectiveness in the Navy, and an Advance, Mo., sailor is helping promote better understanding between the races.

Chief Operations Specialist Bobby J. Clark, a race relations education instructor is trying to promote better Navy human goals and equal opportunity policies by helping his fellow Navy men identify and eliminate both individual and institutional racism that occurs within the military service.

The chief petty officer is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Guy D. Clark of Advance, Mo.

Chief Clark's profession would normally have him working as a supervisor of radar operator- technicians within the ship's combat information center. He and his men would be responsible for detecting and tracking both air and surface contacts on the ship's radar and reporting their movements. This team on any combat ship acts as the eyes of the ship in both peacetime and combat situations.

"I saw things happening within the Navy, and something needed to be done about it," the chief said as he was explaining why he entered the race relations education field. "There had to be some kind of education within the Navy to eliminate racism," he said. The Navy began a large-scale program three years ago and asked for volunteers to enter the race relations program, "so I volunteered," he stated.

The chief is presently serving with the race relations

education division of the human resources management unit attached to the Navy's fleet support office here. The office is located in the heart of downtown Athens.

The fleet support office was established in July 1972 to support Sixth Fleet Navy ships homeported here and those which visit this port. The Navy began its homeporting program in Athens during July of the same year with the arrival of Carrier Group Two staff and their dependents. In September, six ships from Destroyer Squadron 12 and their dependent families came on the scene.

Both units were sent to Athens as part of the forward deployment or "homeporting" program devised to give Navy families more time together and to get the best utilization from a reduced number of operational Navy ships.

The Navy realized that within its structure there were racial problems between white and minority group sailors, mostly stemming from attitudes developed from childhood, which men of all groups brought into the Navy with them.

The Navy, like any American city, has people from many ethnic groups. Racial tensions and problems had developed within the Navy community just as many cities have had the same problems within their population.

Recognizing this, Admiral Elmo R. Zumwalt, Chief of Naval Operations, ordered the establishment of race relations education programs throughout the Navy. The programs are now well established, and attendance at race relations education courses is now required of Navymen from seaman to admiral each year.

Chief Clark feels that the Navy has no race relations problems which the country as a whole does not have, and, unlike some segments of the society, the Navy is taking decisive and wide- ranging action to eliminate the problems and promote understanding.

The Navy employs people from every walk of life and from every corner of the U.S. and its territories. Minority personnel are doing every job within the Navy from cooking the meals to firing guided missiles, from many jobs that run a ship to commanding the ship.

Chief Clark and his family arrived in the Athens area during December 1972 to be attached to the guided missile destroyer escort USS Page, one of the six destroyers homeported here. During June 1973 he became the ship's race relations education officer. The chief has been on temporary duty with the fleet support office this year to further his education and training in race relations.

Clark's family originally accompanied him to Athens, but have recently returned to the States. They are living in Virginia Beach, Va., where they will make their home until Clark's return.

A 26- year Navy veteran, Clark said his family loved Greece and enjoyed their tour in this cultural city. "I felt completely safe about my family when I went to sea," he said. "They were more safe here in Athens than any other city we have lived in.

"The language barrier was the biggest problem we encountered when we arrived here," he said. "You have to let the Greeks know that you are attempting to learn their language and that you want to get along with them. When they know this, there are no longer any problems."

Each member of the Clark family speaks a little Greek, but their 10-year- old daughter Susan was the Greek spokesman for the family ... or at least they thought so.

"One day Susan went to a local shop for some olive oil and came home with a bottle of honey," Mrs. Clark said. "Have you ever tried making an oil and vinegar salad dressing using honey?" Needless to say the Clarks used another form of salad dressing that particular time.

The Clarks' three children, Jeff, 14, Susan, 10, and Steven, 9, learned their basic Greek language skills in the U.S. school located here. Bobby and Barbara learned what they know of the Greek language in their every day encounters.

"Our family had no serious problems while living in Greece, but others have," Clark said. "The main problem with the American people is that they won't get out into the local community. Most will stay in their little cliques, especially when their husband's ships are at sea," he theorizes.

Clark feels that being stationed in Greece has been especially educational for his children. They learned the Greek language, culture, history and traditions first hand. "I also think that the lack of English language television is an asset," he explained.

"Without the all- day TV, the kids had to plan and do more things on their own, making them better people for it," he remarked.

Hearnes lauded as man of action

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Former Gov. Warren E. Hearnes was lauded as a man of action Wednesday in ceremonies for the unveiling of a portrait of Hearnes.

The portrait of the two-term Democrat, now practicing law in St. Louis and Charleston, was painted in 1965 by former St. Louis Cardinals baseball star Curt Flood.

The 2½-foot by 3-foot portrait will hang in the Capitol rotunda alongside portraits of other ex-governors.

At the ceremony was Carl Flood, brother of Curt Flood.

Carl, also a painter, is serving a 20-year prison sentence for robbery but is working under a job release program for Lt. Gov. William C. Phelps.

In remarks prepared for delivery at the unveiling, the Senate president pro tem, Democrat William Cason of Clinton, praised Hearnes for his support of higher education, for helping to raise Missouri's mental health standards and for being "always compassionate to those on welfare who had no lobbyists to plead their cause."

Cason noted that some of his critics fell out with Hearnes and accused him of arm twisiting in the legislature.

Audit of fuel users could reduce tax losses on diesel gas

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Reduction of losses in the collection of tax on diesel fuel in Missouri can only be accomplished through complete audits of the fuel users, an oil industry official told a special legislative committee Wednesday.

In response to a proposal to place the tax collection burden on the fuel distributor rather than the user as is currently done, John Denman, executive director of the Missouri Oil Council, said that plan would only cause increased paper work for the state and still afford possibly inaccurate information.

Charges have been made in the past that users of diesel fuel have escaped paying the higher seven-cent-a-gallon tax required on fuel used for highway travel by claiming they have used it for now-highway purposes. Diesel fuel used for non-highway purposes is only taxed the 3 per cent sales tax, about 12 cents per dollar less than the highway use tax.

The change in the collection system, proposed to the joint committee on energy resources by oil jobber B. A. Brown, would have required diesel fuel users to certify to the distributor at the time of the purchase how much fuel would be used for non-highway purposes and how much would be used in over-the-road travel, paying the appropriate tax to the distributor. Presently, users report to the state monthly the same information and pay the tax directly to the state.

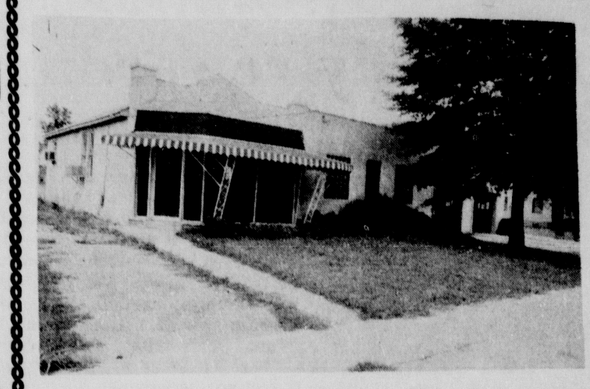

But in either case, Denman said, the user can supply false information to obtain the lower tax rate.

"You have to audit the commercial user," he claimed.

State Revenue Chief James Spradling told the committee, however, that he did not believe losses in collection of diesel fuel tax are anywhere near $40 million, as some have claimed.

While admitting that there is "slippage," he said his department is working on regulations to improve reporting procedures and will also have some recommendations for legislative action by early October.

Kris Kristofferson: 'Me and music are mutually rewarding'

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Finishing a late breakfast of ham and eggs, Kris Kristofferson set back in a roomy, farmhouse kitchen and lit a cigarette.

Beside him sat his wife and singing partner Rita Cooledge. On her lap their 5-month-old daughter, Casey, was being fed.

"You know, everyone says I'm more relaxed now," Kristofferson said. "And maybe I am.

"I kind of think it's the way you expect me to be like now that I have an old lady and a baby. Everyone says how laid back I am.

"I just really have a lucky life right now. I guess that 38 is time to get a little serious. You have to get rid of your teenage anxieties sometime.

"But relaxed? Man, you should have seen me last night."

Last night, Kristofferson, Rita and their band had been working on the final touches of a new album. For a week they had been recording at the studio-farm outside Nashville. They hadn't had time for social visits with some of their best friends.

Before coming to Tennessee, they finished a summer show tour in Japan, Australia and New Zealand. Before that, Kristofferson had acted in Sam Peckinpaw's film "Bring Me the Head of Alfredo Garcia."

Kristofferson walked out of the kitchen, across the lawn to a log cabin which houses the recording studio. He opened a beer and lit another cigarette.

"That tour was fun, but demanding as hell. I imagine there will be a time when I'm not performing, but I hope there is never a time when I will not be writing.

"I don't think I would ever be satisfied if I wasn't writing music. Me and music are sort of mutually rewarding.

"I'm writing as much now as I ever did. It kind of goes in cycles, and I don't know if the songs are as good, better or what.

"You know I still get scared performing. It's not maybe as bad as at first. I don't know if it would be the same if I didn't get scared. It's like getting sick before football games. When I stopped getting sick before games, it wasn't the same. Something was lost.

"Johnny Cash is the same way. I've seen John so scared before a show he was just like this," Kristofferson said, shaking his hand nervously.

Kristofferson played back tapes of the previous night's work. After one song, a rendition of Larry Gatlin's "Rain," he laughed: "Man Rita's voice is so good I'm almost afraid to go on stage with her.

How to Use Exercise Bicycle

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb — With all the emphasis on exercising today, I feel my husband and I do not get enough of it. We bought an exercising bike. What I would like to know is, how can we go about it. I mean, how much time to start with, and how should we increase the time. I have started with five minutes three times a day. Am I overdoing it?

Dear Reader — There isn't any set rule for this. It also depends a lot on the type of exercise bicycle you're using. Some are fixed so you can adjust the tension on the wheel and thereby increase the load. People who are in reasonably good physical condition to start with can obviously begin at a higher level than those who are unaccustomed to any significant amounts of physical exercise. In general, and it has to be simply a general rule of thumb for the person I have not seen and not been able to examine or know what his exercise history is, I suggest that he start at a very low level. Of course, if he already has any medical problems he is aware of, he should talk to the doctor before beginning any exercise program.

For the individuals who appear to be in good health and have just not had any significant amounts of exercise, I usually suggest that they start bicycling for three to five minutes at a speed which is comfortable for them and at a tension which doesn't create very much stress on the legs. That is, it should be comfortable and well within the capacity of the person without any strain. Then, the amount of exercise can be increased about a minute a week. Always make certain to stay within a comfortable speed and tension on the wheel and never exercise at a rate that makes you feel that the legs are working too hard or that it causes the heart to beat too fast. If you want to take your heart rate while you're exercising, you can usually do it. For medically unsupervised exercise you should try to keep your heart rate below 120 beats per minute while exercising. If the exercise effort causes your heart to beat any faster than this, you are either pumping too fast or the tension has been turned too tight on the exercise bicycle.

Exercise bicycles are fine because they can be placed in front of the television set. Individuals who spend much time in front of the television set are the very ones who often need the exercise, and the exercise should be something besides reaching for potato chips and dip or, just as bad, bending the elbow. It also provides a way of occupying yourself while you're doing exercise. Pedaling at a very slow rate without any heavy load on the bicycle during your favorite television program is a good way to program a daily exercise activity. Exercise done during the evening newscast, for example, combines keeping you well informed and keeping you in shape.

Exercise bicycles also have the advantage of eliminating the jarring effect that sometimes occurs with jogging and running type programs. They can also be used by individuals who have balance problems but are still able to do some exercise. Then, of course, they can be used in all kinds of weather indoors.

What's the law?

The case of the high-flying sport

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Zeppo was a motor boat enthusiast who would have been better off wearing a parachute instead of a life preserver. Practicing for an upcoming race, he went zooming down a strange river at 50 miles per hour when, suddenly he went shooting out over a dam.

Finding himself suspended 100 feet in the air above a reservoir, Zeppo quickly raced through the Lord's Prayer as he plunged helter- skelter into the drink below. When he finally bobbled to the surface, he sued the owner of the dam for his injuries.

"What does Zeppo want from me?" queried the owner of the dam. "If he was going to go flying over my dam, he should have been in an airplane instead of a motor boat."

"Not to have posted signs warning that the dam was there," retorted Zeppo, "was sheer carelessness. By the time I discovered his dam dam I needed wings -- and I thought I was going to get them."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make the dam owner pay high- flying Zeppo for his injuries?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that the only rational inference to be drawn from Zeppo's accident was that it was due solely to his own irrational indifference to where he was going on an unfamiliar river at 50 mph. His apparent lack of care for his own safety, concluded the judge, precluded him for collecting for his injuries.

Doctors think tiny infant has chance

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Surgeons here say an operation to save the life of a week-old baby so small he could be cupped in the doctor's hands has been a success.

Lee Allen Bailey was born Aug. 19, about a month prematurely, at the University of Kentucky's Chandler Medical Center. He weighed just over a pound.

Doctors say such infants usually cannot live more than six hours. But despite his size, Lee, the son of Rainey Nora Bell Bailey of Ashland, Ky., showed signs of vitality.

He was placed in a special intensive care unit and carefully watched. Physicians observed that he couldn't keep food down. They took an X ray, which showed that the infant had a bowel obstruction.

They said that without an operation, the child would eventually die from lack of nourishment, but the chance of success in operating on so small an infant were slim.

The baby was fed intravenously until a team of three surgeons and two anesthesiologists was ready to perform the operation on Aug. 28.

The surgeons, led by Dr. Juda Z. Jona, worked for three hours, using instruments designed for delicate eye surgery to remove the obstruction and to insert tubes in the baby's stomach and bowel, which was about the size of a shoestring.

Jona said on Wednesday the operation is considered a temporizing one enabling the baby to carry on body functions and to grow.

Lee has now doubled his birth weight.

"When he has reached four to five pounds we will do a final operation," Dr. Jona said. "If that is successful, that is all he will require."

The final operation, relatively simple compared with the first, would involve suturing the bowel so the digestive system can function normally.

"It was a miracle that he lived until the operation could be performed," Dr. Jona said. "I have never operated on this small a child before. We've done it on lab creatures but never on human beings."

Hayti counselor resigns position

HAYTI— It was an emotional scene in the Hayti City Hall Tuesday night.

After more than 22 years of service to the City of Hayti, James "Tick" Vickrey, city counselor, tendered his resignation to Mayor Fred Chaffin and the Hayti City council.

The lawyer and former prosecuting attorney of Pemiscot County presented his letter of resignation to City Clerk Marcele Russell for her to read to the council.

It had been known for some time that Vickrey would be leaving the county and his position as city counselor of Hayti as well as his law practice in Caruthersville. Two months ago he was presented a plaque of appreciation by the Hayti council.

His letter of resignation:

"In order to enter full time service in the U. S. Government, I hereby reluctantly tender my resignation as city attorney, effective immediately.

"I want to earnestly express my deepest appreciation for the splendid cooperation each of you-- and all other city officers and employees- have at all times given and for the patience and understanding you have always warmly extended to me.

"After more than 22 years of continuous service, I cannot recall a single instance when a requested act of cooperation from any present or past officer or employee was denied to me; and it is especially difficult to leave you at this particular time when I believe the men and women now serving the various offices and departments make up the best team in the entire history of our community.

"Again, I want to thank you for the certificate of appreciation recently awarded for the service I attempted to render. I will treasure it always; and I would like to leave one serious admonition for you to always remember: So long as you serve the City of Hayti in any capacity, you are under a solemn trust as public servants for the most wonderful people in the world- the real "salt of the earth."

"With all the sincerity I am capable of expressing, I pray for God's blessings on each of you and on this community where my heart will always be."

Mayor Chaffin said "I would like to express my thanks for the city for your services." The council voted to accept the city counselor's resignation.

Prior to his resignation, Vickrey turned over to the council his files on the Lee Roy Bain case. Bain resigned as mayor of Hayti April 4 after it was discovered that $2,617.35 had been misappropriated from Hayti city funds. Vickrey also turned over the original warrants amounting to $2,617.35 in addition to the additional warrants found misappropriated via an audit conducted shortly after Bain resigned.

Bain had promised to replace the funds no later than six months from April 3. That date is Oct. 4. Mayor Chaffin told the council that none of the funds have been replaced as yet.

In other council news, a resolution was passed making it possible for insurance companies to issue flood insurance in Hayti. After July 1, 1975, anyone living in a flood zoned area must have this insurance in order to build an addition to a house or build a new house in such an area. Both Steele and Caruthersville already have adopted such resolutions.

The council gave Mayor Chaffin the authority to negotiate with the abstract company and property owners to get easements from Swan Lake Drive to the south city limits on Route J. This will be done in order to extend water lines in that area before the new highway by- pass is built.

City Collector Bob Turnage told the council that he had received a few complaints from people who have noticed cars in the city without city stickers. He recommended a roadblock by city police and the council agreed.

A letter from the Missouri State Highway Commission was read. The letter stated that improvement of Route P in Hayti was not programmed at the present but the improvement will be kept in mind for the future. The letter also said the state will move the city limit sign a mile further east in the near future as a result of the recent annexation election.

Veto override fails

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Following the pattern set by the Senate, the Missouri House failed today to gain a two-thirds majority in its first attempt to override a veto by the governor of bills passed in this year's legislative session.

Democrat Leo McKamey of Kansas City joined the Republicans in turning back the override attempt of a bill to give the American Bicentennial Commission more automonomy. It gained 94 votes, 15 short.

The Senate failed Wednesday in five attempts to override vetoes.

But even though the upper chamber was unsuccessful in overriding vetoes of bills that had been given a considerable chance, another attempt was expected again today on the same measures. The original defeats came with the absence of Democratic Sen. Edward Linehan of St. Louis, who could be expected to vote in favor of an override.

The House was to receive recommendations through its Appropriations Committee to override vetoes of $1.5 million for storm sewers in the St. Louis area and $1.4 million in capital improvements around the state.

"Right now, the capital improvements have the best chance,'' speculated Appropriations Chairman James Russell, D-Florissant, following a hearing of his committee on the matter late Wednesday night.

Although acknowledging that any chance of an override is slim because of the needed two-thirds majority of 109 House members, Russell said the capital improvements vetoes were in a favorable position because they involved revenue sharing money that would be lost if not spent in two years. He also pointed out that by going ahead with the projects now, the state could avoid paying the continually rising construction costs in the coming years.

The committee, however, failed to take a stand on some $3.5 million in funding vetoes for higher education after House Speaker Richard Rabbitt, D-St. Louis, said many department directors had confided to him they were afraid to publicly call for an override for "fear of retaliation in the coming years" from the executive branch.

Russell agreed with the evaluation after noting that many university officials who had decried the vetoes originally, indicated to the committee that they now could apparently live within the reduced budgets.

But Russell predicted that in light of the lukewarm attitude on the part of higher education officials, for whatever reason, "higher education doesn't have much of a chance as it stands now."

Those vetoes had been considered by key legislators as having a good chance of being overridden.

Earlier Wednesday, the Senate fell three votes short in gaining the 23-vote majority needed to override the veto of a bill to increase aid to junior colleges, the one rejected measure given the best chance of a successful override attempt by legislative leaders.

Senate President Pro Tem William Cason, D-Clinton, along with Sens. Richard Webster, R-Carthage, and Albert Spradling, D-Cape Girardeau, led the unsuccessful bipartisan override attempt which fell under a tide of sentiment against increased government spending.

Another measure turned down by Gov. Christopher S. Bond on the grounds of the state's poor fiscal situation was a $3 monthly increase for recipients of Aid to Dependent Children. That attempt gained only 183 favorable votes, five short of the needed 23.

Msgr. John Shocklee, speaking for a "poverty coalition" of the Missouri Council of Churches, the Missouri Catholic Conference and the Missouri Association for Social Welfare, lashed out against the override failure.

"Saddest of all is that the legislature has shown that the human needs of the people are not a major concern," he said.

Both Rabbitt and House Majority Leader Kenneth Rothman, D-Clayton, expressed regret over the failure of both the ADC and junior college bills. Had the attempts been successful, they said, chances for the needed two-thirds majority in the House were good.

Other vetoed Senate bills upheld Wednesday were regulation of grain moisture content, pay hikes for employes of the St. Louis collectors office and a pay boost for referees and court reporters in the state Workmen's Compensation Division.

Reconsideration is expected on the junior college, ADC, grain moisture content and St. Louis collector's office pay hike bills during the constitutionally required session.

Gas price hike began Wednesday

A rate increase for customers of Associated Natural Gas customers went into effect Wednesday, according to John Watson, a spokesman for Arkansas-Missouri Power Co. which owns the gas firm.

The increase for residential customers would total 7.6 per cent based on an average use of 100 cubic feet per month. Ark-Mo also put the rate increase into effect in Arkansas.

The increase will appear on bills where the gas meter was read after Wednesday,, Watson said.

The company had been seeking an increase of 16 per cent, but was granted 9 per cent by the Public Service Commission.

Watson said if the Public Service Commission does not approve a rate hike at the hearing in December, or if the rate increase is lower than the interim rate increase, the company will

Examining for bollrot

Joe Scott of Sikeston, state agronomy specialist with the University of Missouri Delta Agriculture Center in Portageville, examines cotton near Sikeston for signs of bollrot. Bollrot may become a problem due to recent abundant rains and high humidity. (Daily Standard photo)

Too much rain is hurting cotton

Cotton in the Bootheel is suffering from too much rain, bollrot is becoming a problem and cotton is getting too tall as regrowth is taking place in most fields.

Joe Scott of Sikeston, state agronomy specialist at the Delta Research Center in Portageville said today that growers who have a heavy bottom crop and with the danger of bollrot are preparing to bottom defoliate. "This could be a profitable practice as our crops are likely to be late and it could be sometime before the entire plant can be defoliated without loss of yield," Scott said.

Wet weather and rank cotton can also mean insect problems. Fields should be scouted often for bollworms and boll weevils. Bollworm counts are running high in some fields according to our Cotton Entomologists, he noted.

Soybeans have benefited from rains except on heavy soils which have become water- logged. Bean yields will be reduced on these fields.

"In early fall, we get questions concerning dessicants for soybeans and grain sorghum. Growers want to dry up growing weeds that will interfere with harvesting operations in soybeans. Recent rains have made this more of a problem. Grain sorghum growers want to lower moisture in grain sorghum plants that have mature grain for early harvest.

"At present the only dessicant we can use on soybeans, if the crop is to be used for feed or food, is Paraquat. Diquat, Dow General or Endothal can be used on beans harvested for seed only."

Scott said Paraquat, at the rate of 1/2 to 1 pint per acre, depending on weed in festation, will do a satisfactory job of drying out most of the weed growth in the crop and will also defoliate beans. Sufficient volume should be used for good coverage. Add a pint of non-ionic surfactant for each 50 gallons of spray. Soybeans should be fully mature before application and when at least half of the leaves have dropped. Immature beans will be injured.

In the case of grain sorghum, there is no

What has happened to law and order?

Recent articles about the operations of the New Madrid County jail seems to be more like a training center for further criminal acts than a place designed to hold people who have broken the law.

Sheriff W. L. "Cowboy" Ramsey reportedly knows of the beatings and claimed he does not condone the beatings of persons arrested in New Madrid County, however the list of reported beatings in the jail is rather lengthy.

One area law enforcement official commented that maybe Ramsey's trouble lies in his outside interests. Besides being the sheriff, he farms, owns a motel and trailer park. His salary was listed as the tops in the county in the most recent figures out of the courthouse.

Legislation should be introduced and passed, requiring that sheriffs relinquish all of their outside interests so that they can focus all of their attention of the job they are elected to do.

Another piece of legislation that should be considered, would require that sheriff's may serve only two, four year terms. It seems that those that have been in office for over a number of years, neglect their duties more and more as the years of service mount. This is common, but not true in all cases. Scott County is one we should be proud of.

We have noticed where the people of Perryville have asked for help in an investigation of their police department. Lawmakers should look into every incidence reported. The city, county and state law officers are paid by each of us and we should get the protection that we need ... not halfassed.

We have heard where a county prosecutor and state supreme court judge have been charged with violation of the federal hunting laws.

Now isn't that a fine howdy do ... These people are supposed to set prime examples ... We bet they pressure their way out of the situation. That's the way things are conducted now-a-days ... They should be made examples of, not just write them off because they hold some big office.

Now, I ask you ... What has happened to law and order?

ORGIN OF THE WHITE HOUSE

The White House at Washington, D.C., is a plain but impressive mansion, set in a green park overlooking the wide waters of the Potomac River. Stately and dignified, shadowed by tall sycamores, oaks, and poplars, the President's house has for more than a century sheltered the nation's leaders.

George Washington, who loved the Potomac country, selected the site, and James Hoban, a talented young Irish architect, designed the house, modeling it after the Grecian palace of the Duke of Leinster near Dublin. It was built of Virginia sandstone, being completed in 1799.

In 1814, after the battle of Bladensburg, the British occupied Washington and ransacked the Executive Mansion. After they had set fire to the building, a heavy rain began to fall, which continued all that night. The building was not heavily damaged, but was discolored by smoke. Later, the building was painted white, to cover the fire stains.

Since that time, the "White House" has been covered at regular intervals with thick coats of white paint, which serves to prevent crumbling of the sandstone walls, and gives it its named.

STRETCHING HEALTH DOLLARS

Economizing on medical care is something that most of us look upon with a jaundiced eye. Shopping for good health at a bargain counter is generally a bad policy. However, there are legitimate, commonsense ways to economize even here.

The American Medical Association points out that you can cut your medical bills and offers some sound suggestions for doing so. Not only do the suggestions stretch the medical dollar, but actually, if followed, they would provide better protection for a family. The first recommendation is to have a family doctor. He should be chosen carefully for his reputation in the community, the type of practice he has developed and his availability. The local medical society can supply names of physicians from which a choice can be made. Your neighbors or your minister can frequently offer helpful advice. When a person starts going to a physician, he should ask him frankly about his fees. It should be remembered that it doesn't pay to wait too long to see a doctor in the hope of saving money on medical bills since this defeats the purpose of preventive medicine, and emergencies are always more expensive. Everyone should have a periodic checkup then, whenever possible if illness occurs, use the telephone -- your family doctor can frequently give advice over the phone regarding minor health problems -- when he is familiar with the health history of his patient. Buy enough health insurance -- in the long run health insurance is a bargain. People 65 or over should check their eligibility for medicare, and everyone should take allowable tax deductions for medical expenses.

Finally, the best way to hold down medical expenses, says the AMA, is to "Stay healthy! ... Your health is determined in large measure by the kind of life you lead." Everyone should follow these commonsense suggestions for better health at lower cost.

OUR TURN TO BLINK

While the United States is preoccupied with controlling inflation and making indices of prices and jobs behave as people think they should, a grim real world beyond America's borders is proceeding to prove that the laws of the jungle still prevail. Mr. Hugh Sidey, writing in Life magazine under the title "The arms race hasn't stopped," tells of the staggering buildup in Soviet military strength. He also tells how "... developments in Russian weaponry are now coming so fast and are so complex that it is difficult to know how to tell the press and the public about them." American officials, says Mr. Sidey, expect one day soon the equivalent of another Sputnik.

Another columnist, Mr. Stewart Alsop, who has repeatedly devoted his columns to the Russian military buildup, especially of nuclear missiles and submarines, foresees " ... the serious possibility that the Soviets are building up for a new eyeball-to-eyeball nuclear confrontation, like the 1962 Cuban crisis, in which it would be our turn to blink. The likely locale of the confrontation is obvious — the Middle East." While Americans dream of a generation of peace they could well be preparing the way for another Pearl Harbor — or worse. At the very least, we are now living in a period when "grim surprises" of a military nature can be expected momentarily.

The statistics say that the federal government is now a larger dispenser of fringe benefits than private industry. In 1970, fringe benefits in private industry amounted to 26.6 percent of basic wages and salaries while the figure for the federal government was 27.8 percent. This contrasted with the last survey made by the U.S. Labor Department in 1968, when private employer expenditures came to 25.1 percent and the federal government's were 24.3 percent.

The image of government as a progressive employer compared to private enterprise should be tempered by the fact that private enterprise carries a double burden. It must pay for its own fringe benefits as well as put up the taxes that go to support the fringe benefits of those who work for government. It is hardly a fair comparison.

GRAVE CONSEQUENCES

Until recently, spokesmen for the investor-owned, business-managed electric utility industry in the United States expressed the belief that the power needs of the country could be met and electric energy reserves steadily increased. Now they are not so sure.

In a blunt statement of facts, Mr. Shearon Harris, president of a major electric company and chairman of the Edison Electric Institute, reports: "The rush to establish environmental regulations and to legislate environmental quality in a hurry is leading our nation toward a situation in which the electric utility industry, one of the best tools we have available to our society for helping to deal with environmental problems, could be severely crippled." Mr. Harris listed four examples of court rulings and governmental actions which led to his warning. These include: denial of a partial operating license for the Quad Cities Nuclear Plant in Illinois; a court ruling under the 1899 Refuse Act which holds, "The potential for delaying construction of needed facilities and of bringing industrial production to a virtual standstill through application of the National Environmental Policy Act in ways its authors surely never intended ...;" proposed water quality legislation, which goes further than any law yet passed, if it were to become law would cost the electric utility industry alone -- and thus its customers -- between $15 and $28 billion; the Environmental Protection Agency has published performance standards setting limits for sulfur emissions at coal-burning electric generating stations which, in most parts of the nation, require installation of equipment that is simply not available.

The consequences of the combination of environmental extremism and government regulation gone berserk can be graver and more far-reaching than the public suspects.

CRIMINALS IN ACTION

Two incidents on the crime front in recent weeks have horrified the nation and driven home the point to all of us that criminal activity must be checked if citizens are to live in security and without fear. The first of these headline stories broke at the Texas state prison at Huntsville where a hardened core of inmates seized hostages and kept authorities at bay for more than a week. Two of the hostages were slain when lawmen finally broke through to end the attempted breakout.

The second story concerned a prison break in Colorado. Three men who escaped there went on a crime spree in Texas, killing and wounding innocent victims, raping women, stealing automobiles and weapons and terrorizing a section of North Texas.

Only the bravery of police officers put a halt to these outrageous sprees. That is the job of officers, but we, the citizens who look to them for protection, have a part to play also. Lawmen are undermanned as they stand between us and the jungle. As citizens we can see to it that our communities get more policemen, provide them with better equipment and training and show civic pride in their accomplishments. We can also see to it that prosecution staffs are sufficient and that the laws of our states are ample to deal with criminals, including the death penalty.

We suggest that you look into the crime picture of your own community and then discuss with your neighbors and authorities what you can do to help. HLH

Honeymoon Running Out? Labor Set To Break With Ford on Anti-Inflation Strategy

WASHINGTON — As an old Wolverine center, Jerry Ford has turned into a fine Saturday afternoon quarterback. But soon will come Monday morning. Say, by the end of the season -- the political season. Then he'd better wear his helmet.

The opposition -- labor chief George Meany, who says we're already in a 1930s-type depression, and the Democrats -- respectfully are letting him call the signals. Then they'll smash his economic line. Hard.

The opposition, for example, has gone along with the Council on Wage and Price Stability charade. They watched President Ford toss the ball to Congress when he could have run with it himself.

Mr. Ford has the executive power to set up such a council himself with a one-paragraph directive. He needn't have gone up the Hill. Its cost "is chicken-feed" according to one top labor chief. A million-dollar budget for a 25-man council staff.

But the togetherness theme after the Nixon Apocalypse is good. Further, some labor leaders and industry people know that when White House headhunters (talent scouts) were seeking staffers for the new council they positively asked specialists to recommend weaker men and women who wouldn't come on too strong and have it appear that Mr. Ford was on his way to political leprosy -- wage and price controls which many still believe are now absolutely essential.

Further, the insiders see the appointment of economic coordinator Ken Rush as council chairman as a signal that little will be done to keep wages and prices in line.

"Nixon's man Rush," says one insider "was thrown to the wolves instead of out the door. Rush has talked with Meany but he's helpless. He can't influence either big labor or big business."

Neither labor nor the harnessed industrial captains will tolerate guidelines of any kind. How can they until the national work force rank and file and interest rates are clapped under some controls?

Meany is considered moderate when he talks of labor's need for a 12 per cent annual wage increase. That's tiddlywinks compared with what's being won in the field. And to expect the wage and price council to handle it is much like Don Quixote trying to use the Washington monument as a lance.

Just look at what the West Coast construction unions have won these past few months for scores of thousands of craftsmen: The Northern California carpenters were making a cost package of $10.90 an hour. They got $1.72 an hour more for the first year of a three-year contract -- or a total of $12.62 an hour or $504.80 for a 40-hour week. And there are wage reopener clauses in the second and third years.

In Southern California the carpenters' previous wage rate was $9.44 an hour. In this year's new contract they won a $1.60 an hour more. Next year $1.45 an hour more. Third year, another dollar. Total $4.05 increase over a three-year pact -- or a jump of $162 a week more.

This is a total of $13.43 per hour -- before overtime.

Thus it runs. The story of the $108-a-day carpenter has already been recorded. There are equally high percentage gains for laborers in Northern California. Or in Washington (state). They were making $7 an hour. They've just gotten an additional $1.30 this year; minimum of another 95 cents next year and 90 cents the third year. This comes to at least a raise of $3.15 or a hike of $126 per man per week.

Now the cost of living escalator clauses are creeping into the construction trades. What does this do to contractors trying to bid on a major job? They have to jump their estimates. If they underrated the cost of living rise over a two- or three-year period they would go bankrupt.

With bread going for 60 and 75 cents a loaf and heading for a dollar, who can blame those who shout for cost of living increases in their new contracts. But what it does to inflation is still overlooked. The spread of the clause is fantastic. It now covers some 5 million workers. It has seeped into the garment industry and the municipal field for the first time on any significant basis.

Actually the only fields not yet covered are coal, oil and rubber. But the miners will get their cost of living clause this time. Wages then will spurt in these major industries. Who knows how much? Who knows how much higher the new energy costs will go?

The story is the same in a score of industries. This year the fuse has been lit by contract victories, for example, in the construction arena where wages and the fringers now have risen to 172.4 per cent over the 100 per cent of the 1967 base year.

So it will explode all over the nation during next year's massive collective bargaining.

There's no way to keep it all down without price controls or some food subsidies as they did in England and in some of the Iron Curtain nations.

Certainly there will be some special action in selective depressed fields, such as construction. But the White House will hold on to a tight-money policy. There will be unemployment -- perhaps well over five million. Labor won't sit still. Neither will the Democrats.

Jerry Ford will discover soon enough that it was easier playing the center for the Wolverines than for the White House.

GOOD NEIGHBORS

WASHINGTON -- Every time you come back from vacation you find some old neighbors have moved out and new people have moved in. Take my neighborhood, for example. You can imagine my surprise when I saw some strange kids playing on the lawn at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue.

"Who are those kids?" I asked my friend Marty.

"Oh, didn't you know? The Nixons moved out in August."

"They did?" I said in surprise. "It's funny they didn't mention anything about it when I left in July. It must have been awfully sudden. Did they give any reason why they were leaving?"

"No," Marty said, "one day they were there, and the next day a moving van pulled up and they were gone. You know how old man Nixon used to keep his thoughts to himself, so we weren't too surprised when he upped and left."

"That's a shame," I said. "He was a nice fellow and never caused anyone any bother. I'm sorry I didn't have a chance to say goodby. Any idea where they went?"

"I'm not too sure. I think maybe Peoria."

"Why Peoria?" I asked.

"Well, they kept talking about Peoria all the time. Every time they did something they wanted to know if it would play in Peoria. So we figured that's probably where they went. But that's just a guess. They could have gone anywhere."

"Does anyone know why they moved?"

"Something to do with trouble in the government. The gossip we heard is that if he resigned, he'd be assured of a pension. But if he tried to stick it out, he'd be canned with nothing. So I guess he took the money and ran."

"Who moved into the house?"

"Family called the Fords. They're really nice people. Everyone seems to like them."

"What's he do for a living?" I asked Marty.

"He used to be a congressman, but now I think he's got some high job in the government, though you wouldn't know it to talk to him. He makes his own breakfast and he leaves the door open so anyone can talk to him. Those are his kids on the lawn there. His wife's a charmer. Used to be in show biz, I hear, but real down to earth. She cooks her own breakfast, too."

"It's good to have nice neighbors," I said.

"Nice isn't the word for it. Do you know the Fords hadn't moved in a week before they gave a dinner dance and invited everyone on the block to come?"

"No kidding?"

"Yup. And they say they're going to have blacks and women and poor people and everyone visit them."

"It's going to be tough to get a parking spot," I said.

"Everyone in the neighborhood is pleased as all get out to have such fine people move in. You never know who you're gonna get to live at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, and it could affect real estate values."

"Any other changes I should know about?" I asked Marty.

"The Ron Zieglers moved to California, and there's talk that Father McLaughlin is going to get a new parish somewhere. I hear the Pat Buchanans are leaving and also the Ken Clawsons.

"Jim St. Clair has gone back to Massachusetts to practice law and the Fred Buzhardts are also leaving town."

"Wow, it's been quite a summer. Anyone besides the Fords moving in that I should know about?"

"Oh yeah, a family named the Rockefellers from New York have just taken a house on Massachusetts Avenue."

"Damn," I said. "There goes the neighborhood."

JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN SAYS: Turkey Never Intended

WASHINGTON -- On July 30 in Geneva, the foreign ministers of Britain, Greece and Turkey solemnly affixed their signatures to a Cyprus cease-fire agreement. The British hailed it as "the first step on a long, hard road." To the Greeks, it represented "the starting point of a fair settlement."

As far as the Turks were concerned, it was apparently an act of hypocrisy. Not for a second, it appears, did Ankara intend to honor its word.

This is the message that emerges from a document we have obtained from highly placed diplomatic souces. It is entitled "Operation Order No. 1," and it lays out the plan of attack used by Turkish forces to capture Cypriot towns near Kyrenia.

It is dated July 30 -- the very day Turkey's foreign minister, Turan Gunes, signed the Geneva agreement. At the precise moment the Turks were declaring peace, in short, it appears they were secretly planning to attack.

Although the document came to us from reliable officials sources who accept it as genuine, there is no way we can completely vouch for its authenticity. We asked several experts at the State Dept. and Pentagon to examine it and give us an informed opinion. They timidly refused to even look at it.

We took it to the Turks and invited rebuttal. An embassy spokesman told my associate Joe Spear that he recognized the names of the Turkish officers listed in the operation order. And he acknowledged that the word "Kartal," used in the document, was the code name for Turkish operations in Cyprus. It means "eagle" in Turkish, he said.

The spokesman then declared that any further comment would be "impossible." The Turkish military, he said, "doesn't tell us anything."

The "mission," as laid out by the operations orders, reads:

"The 28th Division having the objective of extending and ensuring the security of the area occupied will attack on the 30th of July and occupy a line running from Hill 1023 West of Lapithos-Dassi-Sisklipos villages ..."

The Turkish attack actually began on July 31, not July 30. But the assault unfolded exactly as outlined in the plan.

"The 61st Infantry Regiment will move along the Road Sisklipos — and the Sisklipos valley east of the villages Krini-Agios Ermolaos, following the Commando Brigade which will cover the regiment.

"The armored battalion of the armored brigade, with the tanks landed in the region of Kyrenia, will move towards Platani village along the road Bogazi-Kyrenia-Agios Georgios. It will attach the three tanks of the 39th division ... The tanks of the tank battalion in the area of Krini together with the 230 Infantry Regiment will form a task force ...

"The amphibious regiment ... will ... occupy the Karavas Area and will reconnoit the enemy. The commando brigade will attack with its units situated in the area of Sisklipos and occupy the ridge southeast of the woods of Lapithos-Karavas.

"Towed and self-propelledartillery units ... will move into the area of Sisklipos pass and will support the encircling maneuver which will be conducted in Lapithos area ..."

The operations order also contains these instructions:

"American installations in the area of Karavas. They will not be destroyed and measures will be taken to secure life and property ...

"The units taking part in the attack will carry in their lorries food for 3 days. Movements during daylight will be effected in small parties and in such a way as not to be detected by the enemy. As long as the enemy does not fire we shall not fire either."

Just as the plans specify, within three days after gravely declaring in Geneva that they would "desist from all offensive or hostile activities," the Turks had captured four Cypriot towns, including both Lapithos and Karavas.

Around the world, the Turkish ceasefire violations were strongly denounced In Washington, however, there was curious apathy. On August 2, as the Turks were shelling Cypriot towns, State Dept. spokesman Robert Anderson was asked for an official reaction. "I am not persuaded that the ceasefire is in danger or has collapsed," he said.

BELL RINGER: "Ma Bell's" children are not content with their phone system monopolies. They want equipment monopolies, too.

Pacific Telephone, Bell System's gigantic California subsidiary, recently agreed to deliver Model 812 PBX switchboards at a reasonable price to Levi Strauss, Allstate Insurance and others. But once installation was underway, Pacific drastically jacked up the price.

As if this weren't enough, we have now learned that even as its salesmen were quoting the original low price, Pacific's management was estimating how much prices should be raised.

Pacific also assured the California Public Utilities Commission that the additional PBX costs would not "increase any rate or charge" to customers. Yet, at that same time, Pacific was telling customers that some rates would skyrocket.

At Pacific Telephone, a spokesman insisted that the price juggling had nothing to do with trying to underbid competition and then hiking prices once the customer was committed, a classic way of driving out competition. The spokesman insisted that the low price quotes were made only by a few "overzealous" salesmen and that the deals could be terminated without penalty.

But we have located at least one low-cost contract which was dated after Pacific had all the data it needed to predict a realistically higher price. Meanwhile, a consumer advocate, David Wilner, is suing Ma Bell's Pacific subsidiary to roll back the price.

Tax law change to be sought

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — State Revenue Department officials have said they intend to seek legislative action next year to change a portion of the state's tax laws that has cost Missouri more than $1 million annually in recent years.

Tax collection chief A. Gerald Reiss said Wednesday revision of the law that currently prohibits collection of sales tax on gasoline used for non-highway purposes will be part of the department's legislative recommendations, expected to be presented by early October.

The provision, upheld by the Missouri Supreme Court in the 1950s, calls for non-highway fuel users to pay the normal seven-cent-a-gallon road tax when they buy gasoline and then file for a refund of the tax afterwards. But the state cannot collect the 3 per cent sales tax on the fuel as it currently does in the case of diesel fuel used for non-highway purposes.

In 1973, alone, when about 127 million gallons of gasoline was used for non-highway purposes, the state lost an estimated $1.25 million in sales tax revenues. This year, with gasoline prices higher than in the past, officials estimate that loss to be over $2 million.

During a hearing earlier in the day before the joint legislative committee on energy resources, revenue chief James Spradling told the 10-member committee that his department was currently drafting new regulations aimed at tightening up diesel fuel reporting requirements.

Charges have been made in the past that users of diesel fuel have escaped paying the higher seven-cent-a-gallon road tax by claiming to use the fuel for non-highway purposes.

Although Spradling said he did not believe the "slippage" in collections of diesel fuel road tax was anywhere near $40 million as has been suggested, he acknowledged that his department doest not currently have an adequate system for determining how much of the diesel fuel is being used for over-the-road travel.

He said, however, he felt the tax law on special fuels such as diesel fuel could be tightened up by amending its provisions.

"I'm of the opinion now that there doesn't need to be a major overhaul," Spradling said. "I think there needs to be some changes and clarification in our tax laws on special fuels."

The committee was also told by John Denman, executive director of the Missouri Oil Council, that the only way to prevent losses in collection of the road tax on diesel fuel is through complete audits of the users.

His comments came in response to a proposal that the tax collection burden be placed on distributors of diesel fuel rather than on the users.

Arkansas men bound over on charge of possession

BENTON — Three Arkansas residents were bound over to appear in Circuit Court on Sept. 23 following a preliminary hearing in Magistrate Court Wednesday on a charge of possessing eight pounds of marijuana.

Martin Dudley Allen, 20, of Walnut Ridge, Ark., and Gary Dills, 22, and Danny Campbell, 24, of Hoxie, Ark., were arrested May 26 at Cape Girardeau Municipal Airport in extreme northern Scott County. The arrests came after Sheriff John Dennis received a tip from an unidentified person saying that the men would be on a plane landing at the airport with approximately eight pounds of marijuana in their possession.

The men were apprehended when they attempted to get back on the plane.

Judge Lloyd Briggs deferred sentencing for one year against Richard Wayne Davis, 19, of Rock Springs, Wyo., and Albert Samuel Purser, 21, of New Madrid on a possession of marijuana charge.

Davis and Purser were arrested Tuesday night after highway patrolmen Ron Ryan and Mike Robertson stopped their car on Cambridge Drive in Sikeston.

Wayne Gibson, 19, of Rock Springs and Rouget Gerard DeLisle, 17, of Portageville, also arrested by the patrolmen for possession of marijuana, were granted a continuance of cases until Sept. 11.

Claude Slayton of Chaffee was sentenced to nine months in the county jail after he pleaded guilty to assaulting Wanda Slayton on Aug. 27.

An attorney was appointed to defend Norman Travis on a Dec. 20, 1972 charge of stealing personal property belonging to City Cab Co. of Sikeston.

After waiving his preliminary hearing, Ron Woodruff of St. Louis was bound over to appear in Circuit Court on Sept. 12. Woodruff is charged with writing a $126.50 bad check on Oct. 19 to Jack Frost Discount in Sikeston.

After pleading not guilty to an Aug. 10 charge of tampering with a motor vehicle, an attorney was appointed to defend Larry Eugene Berry of Scott City.

Fined for speeding were: Randall Floyd Brown of Scott City, $125; Marguin Bishop of Chaffee, $15; Daniel George Lankheit of St. Louis, $19; Guy Thomas Schwab of Cape Girardeau, $15; Burleigh Eudean Spitler of Sikeston, $11; Joan Henderson of Charleston, $15; and Carol Sue Carney of Dexter, $15.

Allen Louis Howard of Sikeston was fined $15 after he pleaded guilty to an improper vehicle registration charge, and Troy Lee Ward of Sikeston was fined $25 after he pleaded guilty to a charge of driving without a valid operator's license.

Dunklin library gets grant

KENNETT — The Dunklin County Library has been awarded a $10,000 grant under the Library Services and Construction Act, Title 1, Health, Education and Welfare, to employ a professional librarian to specialize in children's services, Benne Freman, library director, announced today.

Freeman was notified of the grant approval by Charles O'Hallaran, state library director.

The grant will enable the library to hire another professional librarian within the system in addition to Freeman.

Applications for the new position are now being taken, Freeman said, adding that applicants should have a master's degree in library science.

The library board authorized the request for the grant earlier this year, in an effort to secure funds to improve the services of the county library system.

Candidates to be told of Junior Miss pageant

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Tri- County Junior Miss candidates and their parents will be guests during a special meeting at 7 p.m. Wednesday at Southeast Missouri Hospital.

Highlight of the meeting for all high school senior girls interested in the local pageant will be the showing of a 28- minute pageant film titled, "Be Yourself". The movie tells the Junior Miss story and captures much of the fun, adventure and beauty of the festivities.

The Tri- County Junior Miss pageant is scheduled Oct. 12 under the sponsorship of the Cape Girardeau Jaycees. The special meeting on Sept. 11 was arranged to familiarize candidates and eligible high school seniors with Junior Miss standards, goals and procedures.

The three girls chosen as Bollinger, Cape Girardeau and Scott County Junior Misses on Oct. 12 will represent the counties in the state pageant Feb. 1 at St. Louis.

Local prizes include a scholarship to Southeast Missouri State University or to a college of the winning entrant's choice.

"Any local girl, 16 through 18, and a senior in high school is eligible to take part in the pageant," Pat Bucek, chairman of the Tri-County pageant, said.

"It should be pointed out, however, there are rigid standards for the winner. The Junior Miss program is not a beauty contest. Mental alertness, scholastic achievement and creative talent, as well as poise and appearance and youth fitness are considered by pageant judges," he added.

Ann Landers

Ann won't back 'Kid's Lib'

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing to tell you about a new group that I am trying to start. It is called Kid's Lib.

We want the right to express ourselves without being told we are too young to know anything. We also want the right to smoke and drink if we want to at age 13.

I saw a man on TV the other night who gave me this idea and a lot of my friends think it's neat. He said kids at age 13 should be able to handle their own money, choose their own clothes and pick which parent they want to live with if there's a divorce.

Will you back me up? -- A Kid Who Wants To Be Liberated

Dear Kid: No way. You are adding apples and oranges and getting bull- feathers. I agree a 13- year- old should be able to express his opinions, pick his own friends and handle his own money (an allowance, in most cases), and the judge often will allow a 13- year- old to decide which parent he wants to live with. All those things are reasonable, but the crock about 13- year- olds being allowed to smoke and drink is strictly for the birds -- the loons, that is. Forget it, Buster.

Dear Ann Landers: A letter that appeared in your column a few days ago could have been written by me -- same number of children, married same number of years, and the same problem.

To outsiders we appeared to have the perfect marriage -- and it was a very good one, except when it came to sex. I disliked intercourse, avoided it when I could and tolerated it whan I had to.

The inevitable happened. Some little tramp in his office threw herself at him. The day he told me I didn't have to be bothered with sex any longer because he had a good substitute, I nearly died.

I went to my doctor and asked for his help. He recommended that I "psyche myself out" and suggest two books that ten years ago would have been banned as pornography.

Well, Ann, his advice saved my marriage. I decided to be the aggressor, something I had never done before, then I utilized what I had read in the books. My husband was amazed. And so was I. For the first time I enjoyed sex. We have developed a marvelous bedroom relationship and the tramp is nowhere in sight.

I now know I was frigid because I was ignorant (and Puritanical), but all that is over. I'm happier today than I've ever been in my life. Please print this letter if you think it will help someone else, Ann. -- Enlightened Wife

Dear Wife: I do and I will. Here it is.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm having an argument with my husband about the violence on TV and what it is doing to the minds of our young children. I am also against his buying toy guns for our grandchildren. He says I'm a crackpot, that the violence on TV is a good outlet for young children and guns are a apart of our American heritage. He also claims play gun- fighting is a healthy way for kids to express anger. Where do you stand? -- Unresolved In Royal Oak

Dear Un: I agree with you wholeheartedly on the toy gun issue, but I don't buy the theory that either toy guns or violence on TV will make killers out of normal, healthy children. The trouble goes back much further. I believe constructive and informative TV shows are much better for children -- and adults -- than a steady diet of bludgeoning, shooting and blood all over the place. Such exposure cannot help but make the steady, long-time viewer insensitive to killing. Since the airwaves belong to everyone, we should insist that the TV and radio network people elevate the quality of the material offered to the public.

Is alcoholism ruining your life? Know the danger signals and what to do. Read the booklet, "Alcoholism -- Hope and Help," by Ann Landers. Enclose 35 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self- addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 3346, Chicago, Illinois 60654.

Home-canned poison is worse than cobra venom

COLUMBIA — A mid-Missouri housewife was lucky no one wanted to taste her home-canned stringbeans.

It isn't fair to mention her name. In the end, she did the right thing. But someone could have died.

The lady was smart enough to notice that the beans "just didn't look right." She called her extension home economist. And the specialist brought it to the University of Missouri-Columbia.

"I took one look, and it made me sick!" exclaimed Dr. D. M. Graham, chairman of the UMC department of food science and nutrition.

"We found the same type of bacteria in those beans that cause botulism.

"One taste of that stuff would kill you. Ounce for ounce, it's worse than cobra venom! One teaspoon of the toxin will kill a million people."

Graham told the story because 10 to 15 people die each year from food poisoning they get from home canning. That compares with only two or three cases of food poisoning deaths in the last 50 years that have resulted from faulty commercial food processing.

And millions of dollars of good food is wasted each year because it is improperly canned or stored.

"Understanding the shelf life of good food can really save you money," exclaimed Graham. "If you buy a dozen cans and end up throwing half of them away, you double your cost.

"If you buy a gallon of milk and throw out two cups, you've increased your cost 15 per cent. If you have to throw away four slices out of every pound of bread, you've increased your cost by 20 per cent.

"That's also why you shouldn't waste food at the table and why you should wrap the unused portions well before putting them back in the refrigerator."

Dr. Graham, in addition to his UMC responsibilities, acts as regional communicator for the Institute of Food Technologists (IFT), a group of 10,000 food scientists concerned about rising food costs and the effect of shelf life on these costs.

A recent IFT report underlined the importance of keeping food dry and cool.

"At warm room temperatures," said the report, "bacteria multiply rapidly. Under ideal conditions, their numbers may double every 20 minutes. At this rate, a single bacterium could produce a colony of over two million bacteria within seven hours!"

Graham explained that foods lose quality as chemical reactions take place. Rates of simple chemical reactions double as the temperature rises 18 degrees Farenheit (10 degrees Centigrade). Reactions in food products can increase four to seven times as fast, because the chemical reactions are more complex and are speeded up by enzymes.

"The most sensitive example I can think of is canned sour cream," said Graham. "It'll turn brown, separate and it's texture will get 'rough' in a very short time if it's not properly stored.

"On the other end of the scale would be something like a can of peas. This is simply a food stored in its own juice and water. Still, it will lose color and flavor twice as fast with each 18-degree increase in temperature."

Graham tells consumers not to confuse spoilage with loss of quality. The change that occurs is not necessarily harmful (as is the case with botulism), but the food can lose color, flavor or texture.

"It also loses nutritive value," said Graham. "A good indicator is the food's color. Nutritive loss occurs at about the same rate as color loss."

The UMC food scientist warns consumers to follow canning directions very carefully. In the case of the home-canned beans, the lady had used the lid of a peanut butter jar instead of a canning ring, so the jar wasn't properly sealed.

He advised consumers to watch for cans that are puffed, dented on the seams or rusted on the seams. This is an indication that something may have leaked into the can, carrying bacteria inside it.

"If the ends are puffed up," said Graham, "something is growing in the can that produces gas. That could be botulism."

Graham said mortality among those eating food containing botulism is over 50 per cent. There's a bank of anti-serum in Atlanta, but you need to know within a few hours where the food poisoning came from and what type it is.

"If you should eat some poisoned food," said Graham, "your best hope is that you didn' eat all of it and that you have some left so the doctors know what to do."

The IFT report told how a consumer can increase shelf life of food products after they're brought home by maintaining cool, dry storage conditions, rotating food products in order to user the older products first, checking the labels for any special instructions and buying only what can be used within reasonable time.

Graham concurred. And he had this final advice for home canners:

"Make sure that jars are sealed tight. You want to hear a high pitched 'ping' when you tap the top to show that the vacuum is good."

John Watkins. . .Mr. Softball

By BILL HARRISON

Who is John Watkins? Well, every softball fan in the state of Missouri, the entire mid-west and possibly the whole United States know who John is.

John Watkins' name is synonymous with softball. When you hear the name, softball immediately comes to the mind.

John Watkins is a softball pitcher par excellence. He's the Bob Gibson and Sandy Koufax of softball and if the sport had the national attention that baseball has, he would surely be destined for the hall of fame.

John is 39 years old and was born and raised on a farm outside Vanduser. He played softball for Vanduser high school and was the team's centerfielder and leading hitter. John never attempted to pitch a softball until his senior year.

"I was pretty wild but we won the high school championship in 1953." John pitched for Bill Puckett's Stags in 1954 and won the state softball championship. John has been pitching softball for 21 years and has pitched in state tournaments for 20 straight years for one team or another.

John just got back from Springfield where the Mid- Western regional softball tournament was held. He pitched for the state champion Jefferson City Rippeto Mouses. John won the only two games that Rippeto won in the tournament.

"I think if I had pitched in the first game we would have won the tournament. We scored five runs," John commented.

John beat Lincoln, Nebraska 2-1, allowed only two hits, struckout 13 and drove in the winning two runs in the top of the seventh. He came back in the second night against Demoines, Iowa and shut them out on a one-hitter 2-0.

John was ineligible to participate in the national tournament due to the fact that the team he was on won the state tournament.

John has pitched on eight state championship teams and has been on 12 mid-western regional teams and participated in four national tournaments in his 21 years of pitching.

John is ranked in the top three softball pitchers in the mid-west.

John has some of the most impressive credentials a pitcher can possess. He has averaged at least 50 wins a season for the past 20 years. This season's slate was 57-2. His earned run average for the past 20 years is .001.

John can't remember the number of no-hitters he has twirled. He fanned all 21 batters in a game at Kennett in 1971. This feat was performed with some regularity in his prime. He has averaged at least 15 strikeouts per game in his 21 year career.

"A rise ball has been my bread and butter pitch all the way up to the last five years," John said. "I've changed my tactics the past five years due to the fact of age because I can't throw as hard as long. I throw the rise and change drop," John continued. "I have as good a changeup drop as there is," he stated.

Softball is not the only game John is or was good at. He was a fine baseball hitter and had an excellent arm from the outfield position.

In 1954 John was offered a $10,000 bonus to play for then Milwaukee Braves but failed to sign for personal reasons. The Cardinals offered him a contract to play for their Columbus, Georgia team but he was drafted into the army and was unable to report.

John played one year for Murray State University as a freshman in 1956 and led the Racers to the OVC championship with a .376 batting average.

"With all the pitching I have done and am noted for, I pride myself in my hitting more than pitching." John said.

"I play softball because I enjoy it," John said. "The reason I travel over the country is because they won't let me play in Sikeston. Sikeston needs some sponsors and participation," John emphasized.

John has pitched in national softball tournaments in Clearwater, Fla., Newark, N.J., Indianapolis, Ind., and Springfield, Mo. He averages pitching in five games a weekend when the season is in full swing. At 39 and after pitching in over a 1,000 games in the past 20 years, John says that his arm is sound as ever. "I have had some trouble with my knees," he said. "If my legs hold out I should pitch for another five years. I use my head more than I used to. I don't throw as hard now," John continued.

"My biggest thrill in the 21 years that I have been pitching was in 1971 while pitching for Springfield in the National tournament at Springfield. We won third place that year. I came in to pitch in relief and hurled six innings of no-hit ball and when I came up to bat in the top of the seventh inning the partisan crowd gave me a standing ovation for about five minutes and goose pimples began to pop out on my arms," John said, "I'll never forget that."

KANSAS CITY (AP) — It's Oklahoma again in the Big Eight Conference and Nebraska second.

This was the way sports writers and sportscasters voted Wednesday at the conclusion of their annual skywriters tour of conference football practice camps.

Oklahoma, given 33½ firstplace votes among 36 cast, was selected as the team most likely to win the league championship. The nationally first-ranked Sooners piled up 286 points in the balloting on a basis of eight points for first, seven for second, etc.

Nebraska received the other 2½ first-place votes and 250 points. Missouri was third with 206 points, Colorado fourth with 157, Kansas fifth with 149, Oklahoma State sixth with 112, Iowa State seventh with 83 and Kansas State last with 61.

NEW YORK (AP) — Four schools, Boston College, Brown, Cornell and St. Lawrence, have been invited to compete in the 13th annual Eastern College Athletic Conference Hockey Festival, it was announced today by Scotty Whitelaw, commissioner of the ECAC.

The festival will be held at Madison Square Garden with doubleheaders on Friday, Jan. 3 and Sunday, Jan. 5.

Cards obtain Ron Hunt

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Veteran second baseman Ron Hunt was acquired on waivers by the St. Louis Cardinals Wednesday night from the Montreal Expos.

Cardinal officials said the acquisition of the 33-year-old infielder, which followed St. Louis' 5-4 win over the Expos, was expected to add both depth and experience to the team in the waning weeks of the season.

Hunt had batted .268 in 115 games for the Expos this season after posting a career high of 309 in 1973. In 12 seasons with the New York Metsl, Los Angeles Dodgers, San Francisco Giants and Expos he has compiled a lifetime mark of .274.

The scrappy infielder owns nearly every major league record for being hit by pitches. He established a season mark in 1971 when he was struck 50 times and has been hit 241 times during his career, also a major league record. He has been hit 14 times this year.

A native of St. Louis, Hunt was the National League's All Star second baseman in 1964 and 1966.

NEW YORK (AP) — This was back in May, with the college football season still five months away. Notre Dame's Ara Parseghian, coach of the 1973 national champions, was asked the following question:

"Do you remember what happened the last time a team coached by Pepper Rodgers opened against a defending national champion?"

Parseghian's answer:

"My memory's not that bad."

For those whose memories are that bad, what happened was that in the 1972 opener Rodgers' UCLA team ended Nebraska's dream of an unprecedented third consecutive national crown with a 20-17 upset after the Cornhuskers had won 23 games in a row and had a 32- game unbeaten string.

Rodgers has come home to Georgia Tech and on Monday night he gets a chance to upend another national champion when the Yellow Jackets entertain Notre Dame before a nationwide television audience ABC-TV, 9 p.m., EDT.

Says Parseghian: "It's an old cliche, but in our case it was never more true, that it is far more difficult staying on top than it is getting there in the first place. But little did we dream that between the conclusion of spring practive and the start of fall drills our problems would be compounded almost to an unbelievable degree."

Parseghian was referring to the loss of 10 players he expected back, eight of whom were counted on to play key roles this season.

Says Rodgers: "Notre Dame's losing those players is like the man with $10 million who lost $1 million ... he still has $9 million left."

Will the Rodgers lightning strike another national champion? It says here Notre Dame will rub salt in Pepper's wounds ... 35-14.

Last year's picks produced a final tally of 521 right and 189 wrong with 17 ties for a .734 percentage. The bowl count was 8-3, including Notre Dame's 24-23 Sugar Bowl victory over Alabama, which was forecast here as a 27-24 game.

UCLA at Tennessee: Next year, UCLA plays Tennessee in Los Angeles. This year, it's Knoxville, Big Orange

Houston at Arizona State: The winner of this one just might go unbeaten the rest of the way, too. If you like a dark horse for the national championship try ... Houston 33-14.

Eastern Michigan at Miami, Ohio: Miami's 12-game winning streak ties Penn State for the longest such skein in the country. No unlucky number this time ... Miami 17-7.

Mississippi at Tulane: The Green Wave may be a tidal wave ... Tulane 28-7.

North Carolina State at Wake Forest: Pity the poor Deacons. They open with the defending Atlantic Coast champs and in October they face Oklahoma, Penn State and Maryland in consecutive weeks and all on the road. N. C. State 35-7.

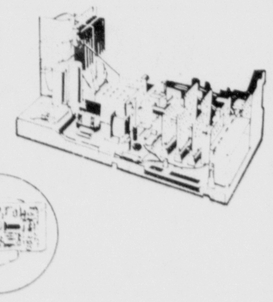

Oregon State at Syracuse: Linus, alias new Syracuse Coach Frank Maloney, finally finds the Great Pumpkin, alias Oregon State's Dee Andros. Syracuse 21-20.

Dexter Ace

DEXTER — Would you believe that Mrs. Marilyn Agey of Dexter sunk a hole- in - one on the fourth hole of the Stoddard County Country Club golf course Friday afternoon?

Well, she did and that before seven witnesses. You might say that that was a pretty good feat and it was. But, did you know that her son, David Agey, of Dexter has performed the same feat three times previously on the same hole.

Big Red releases star

ST. LOUIS (AP) Two-time collegiate track All America Fred DeBernardi was released by the St. Louis Cardinals Wednesday, the National Football League team announced.

DeBernardi, 25, was signed by the Cardinals as a defensive end last winter, but had seen little action.

DeBernardi, 6-foot-6, 250, was originally an 11th-round draft choice of the Baltimore Colts in 1972 and had tried out again for the Colts and New England Patriots last season, but spent most of the year on the pro track tour.

The Santa Monica, Calif., native played little football in college.

Cards bullpen to the rescue

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Al Hrabosky, who is known as the "Mad Hungarian," insists the St. Louis Cardinals' bullpen will carry them to a National League division title.

And the Montreal Expos, the latest victims of Hrabosky's blazing fast balls, were in no position to argue the stocky left-hander's case Wednesday night.

Rich Folkers first came to the rescue after Mike Jorgensen's two-run homer powered the Expos to an early 3-0 lead.

He finally yielded an eighth-inning run, then the hardthrowing Hrabosky locked up the Cards' fourth straight, 5-4, with a two-strikeout ninth inning.

"The thing is we're all rested," maintained the dark-haired, mustachioed Hrabosky of a Cardinals relief corps which includes himself, Folkers and right-hander Mike Garman.

"We're the youngest bullpen in the league," he added, "and nobody's afraid to go out there and throw strikes.

"The Pittsburgh Pirates have Dave Giusti and they've got Ramon Hernandez, which is a great combination. But the big thing is they've been off and on. I've said all year the bullpen is going to be the big factor."

After the Expos climbed on Cards starter Alan Foster, the stylish Folkers demonstrated the whereof Hrabosky spoke.

He fanned seven Expos and issued no hits through 4 2-3 innings until Willie Davis drilled a two-out single to left in the eighth.

Jorgensen followed with a double that scored Davis and produced a 4-4 tie, but pinchhitter Jim Dwyer's single chased home Bake McBride for the Cards in the bottom of the inning.

Folkers' triumph lifted his record to 6-1, and the save was the seventh for Hrabosky.

Garman, the Cards' winner in a game Tuesday night, stands 6-2 with five saves, Hrabosky is 6-1 and the three relievers combined at 11-0 since the All-Star game.

"It isn't a one-month thing either," mentioned Folkers. "Everybody's been doing the job all year."

St. Louis' victory, minus a stolen base by the speedy Lou Brock, was the Cards' fourth in a row and left them 1½ games behind the idle Pirates in the NL East.

"Winning's what it's all about anyway," said Brock, who went 1-for-5 and had no chance to try for his 100th theft.

"How you win is a matter of putting so many ingredients together—pitching, defense, hitting. It's certainly not just a matter of base-stealing."

Yanks red hot

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The New York Yankees are red hot. The Boston Red Sox are red-faced.

Their individual predicaments have given some color to the American League East race.

The Yankees won their 16th game in 20 Wednesday with a 3-0 decision over the Milwaukee Brewers and climbed into a first-place tie with failing Boston in the East.

The embarrassed Red Sox made the tie possible by losing a 6-0 decision to the Baltimore Orioles, their sixth straight loss and their ninth in the last 11 games.

The win moved the third-place Orioles within two games of the top.

Baltimore's suddenly revitalized pitching staff not only beat the Red Sox in their threegame series — they humiliated them with consecutive shutouts.

In the other American League games, the Cleveland Indians stopped the Detroit Tigers 5-4; the Chicago White Sox trimmed the Kansas City Royals 7-0; the California Angels defeated the Oakland A's 5-2 and the Texas Rangers trimmed the Minnesota Twins 1-0.

Jim Palmer and Earl Willams combined to pace Baltimore's victory over the stumbling Red Sox.

Palmer, back on the active roster less than a month after 54 days on the disabled list, hurled a three-hitter. Williams, who has hit eight of his 13 home runs since Aug. 1, clubbed two solo homers and drove in three runs.

Yankees 3, Brewers 0

George "Doc" Medich pitched a five-hitter and retired 15 straight batters at one point to pace New York's victory. Lou Piniella doubled home the first of two runs in the first inning as the Yankees beat nemesis Kevin Kobel.

Indians 5, Tigers 4

Pinch-hitter Rico Carty's runscoring single in the eighth inning off Detroit relief ace John Hiller carried Cleveland past Detroit. With the score tied at 4-4, John Ellis led off the eighth with a single off Hiller, 16-10.

After Jack Brohamer hit into a forceout, Buddy Bell laced a single to third, Brohamer taking third. Carty then batted for Tom McCraw and singled to left, bringing home Brohamer with the winning run.

White Sox 7, Royals 0

Jim Kaat fired a four-hitter and the Chicago White Sox erupted for six runs and seven hits in the fifth inning to beat Kansas City. Paul Splittorff was the loser.

Angels 5, A's 2

Bob Oliver drove in two runs with a double and single to lead California over Oakland. Oliver doubled to drive in Bobby Valentine and then scored himself as the Angels scored twice off losing pitcher Vida Blue in the second inning.

Rangers 1, Twins 0

Ferguson Jenkins blanked Minnesota on seven hits for his 21st win and sixth shutout of the season, pitching Texas over the Twins.

National League scores: New York 4, Chicago 2; Atlanta 5, San Diego 3; St. Louis 5, Montreal 4; Cincinnati 2, Houston 1 and Los Angeles 6, San Francisco 3 in 11 innings.

Phone bill warning issued

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The chairman of the Missouri House Accounts Committee has warned state representatives to bring their long-distance telephone bills in line with the committee's $75 a month policy or face losing their telephone credit cards.

"I'm not raising hell, I just want to tighten up on some of these phone bills," said Rep. Fred DeField, D-Charleston, after meeting with the committee Tuesday.

"When you get up around several hundred dollars, it's kind of ridiculous. If they don't (cut back on expenses), next month we're going to start pulling some of these telephone cards."

According to records of the House administrator, the average monthly long distance telephone bill for all 163 House members ranges between $6,000 and $9,000, and DeField pointed out that most of the House members keep the monthly expense to well below $100.

While less than a dozen representatives have had bills of more than $100 a month this summer, the records that some were very high, led by Reps. Harold Martin, D-St. Louis, and Joseph Fendler, R-St. Louis, who both had monthly bills of more than $400.

Some of those with high bills told the committee that they believe other persons were making the calls and charging them to the House credit cards and DeField said some card numbers may be changed to prevent that problem in the future.

"We don't want somebody using these phone cards who is not authorized to use them," he commented, "and we think that may be happening."

DeField said those with the highest telephone bills were notified in July that they should cut back on phone costs while all members of the House were sent a letter Aug. 23 asking them to keep their phone expenses down.

Council to oversee grant expenditures

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The effects of state reorganization continued even two months after it was implemented as a new council has been formed to oversee the expenditure of federal grants awarded to Missouri by the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration.

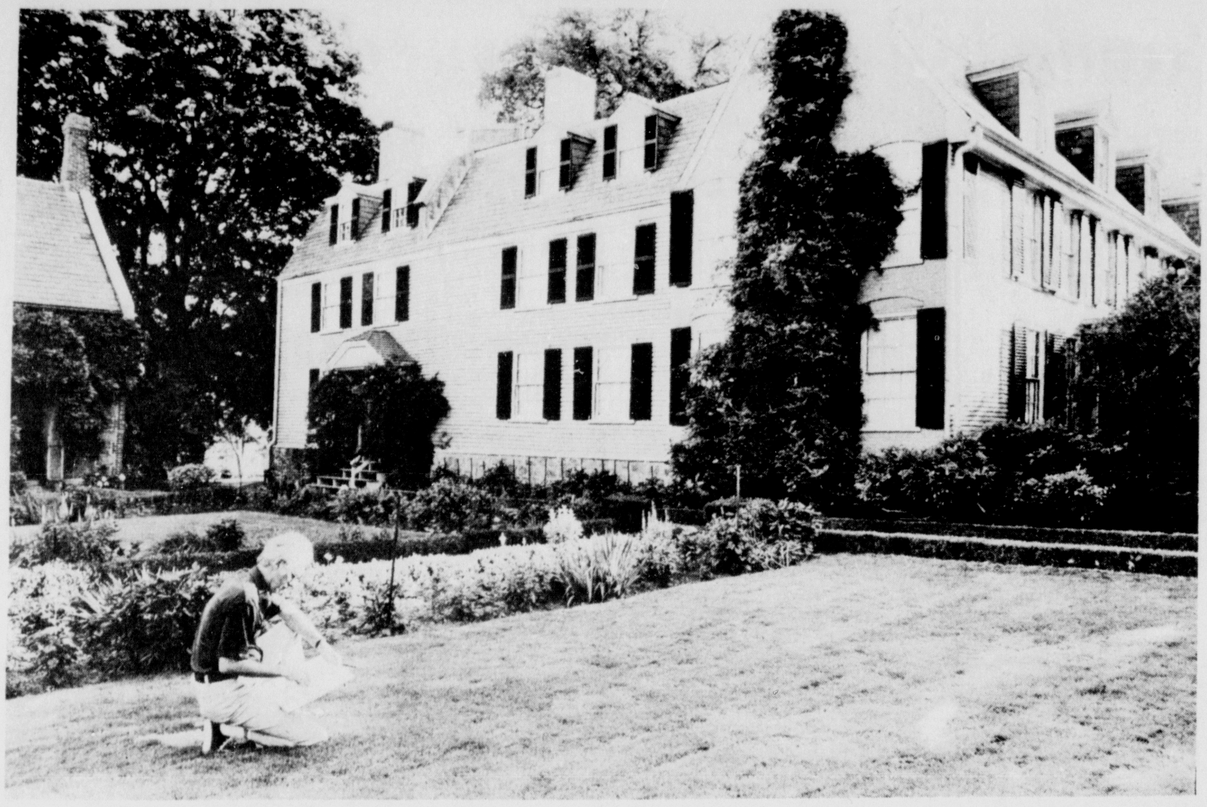

State Public Safety Chief Mike Garrett said Tuesday the new Missouri Council on Criminal Justice, headed by Kansas City attorney Gene Voights, will replace the Missouri Law Enforcement Assistance Council, which was abolished under reorganization.

Garrett also announced that a special task force within the new council will review management of the new agency, which is responsible for developing statewide criminal justice plans and monitoring the expenditure of the anticrime funds.

The new council members are: State Supreme Court Judge James A. Finch, St. Louis Appellate Judge Joseph Simeone, State Prison Chief George Camp, State Probation and Parole Head W. R. Vermillion, Highway Patrol Supt. Sam Smith.

State Sen. William J. Esely, R-Bethany, Pettis County Sheriff Emmett Fairfax, Kansas City Police Chief Joseph D. McNamara, Alexander Netchvolodoff of the attorney general's office, Columbia Newspaper Publisher Henry Waters.

Home of great significance

The Adams House, Quincy, Mass., the nation's only private residence to house two Presidents, is one of 22 historic homes deemed of greatest significance to the U. S. Bicentennial in a survey conducted by Ridge Homes, of Conshohocken, Pa. John Adams called it "Peacefield," but to later generations of Adamses it was known simply as "the Old House." The home was the Adams homestead 1788-1927, and is now administered by the National Park Service.

Parents share responsibility for learning with educators

JEFFERSON CITY — The 1974-75 school year has begun and more than 1,065,000 children and young people will attend Missouri public schools, according to Arthur L. Mallory, state commissioner of education.

Each student represents a home with great ambitions and expectations for its children and youth. The school year itself presents a significant responsibility for the teacher, who must make every effort to assure a successful school year for the student. Parents share with the teacher the responsibility for providing a successful experience for the youngster.

For parents, one of the most important activities on any school day morning is getting the student ready to attend school. Readiness means not only that the child or young person will begin the school day with a nourishing meal and looking as well groomed as possible, but it also means that the student will have a positive attitude about school, about his classmates and about himself.

Attitude, unquestionably, is one of the most important of all human forces. When the attitude is strong and positive, when it is in harmony with the best ideals, few genuine, worthwhile things are beyond reach. When the attitude is troubled and undernourished, life seems hardly worth the effort.

The matter of attitude is where the parent can be without peer. Concern, strength, love and positive attitude can perform miracles with a student, whereas the teachers must support and assist. Lethargy and apathy begin at home; so does a wholesome and positive attitude.

One of the most isgnificant things that a parents can do is to help his youngster develop an attitude which will help him feel good about himself, build confidence in what he's doing and cause him to be willing to explore, cooperate, share and to be enthusiastic about what life has to offer, Mallroy stated.

"If you and I as parents (Joann and I have four teen-agers in our home -- one in college and three in high school) would like to guarantee as much as possible that our children will have a good school year," Mallory said, "we can keep the following in mind:

"Become personally involved in the school program. Visit the school and talk with teachers and the principal. Offer to be of assistance when we can. This display of genuine interest and a positive attitude toward school will be an encouragement to the students in our homes.

"Find some time, at least weekly, to talk with our children about their educational programs and their studies. It is helpful from time to time for an entire family to sit down and discuss what the youngsters are concerned about at school. Find ways to encourage our children in their school activities. Encouragement and judicious praise are among life's greatest motivators.

"When our children are having difficulty with their school work, we should go directly to someone who will assist. Often this is the teacher; somethimes it is the principal or the guidance counselor. But always it should be someone who cares about them and who will be willing to assist.

Rough roads slow farm traffic

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Rough country roads and rickety bridges are slowing farm traffic to the market and result in inflationary food prices, says a research report released by an organization sponsored by road builders and other highway construction groups.

The Road Information Program (TRIP) said in its report today that about 20 per cent of the state's 100,158 miles of rural roads are deficient and should be resurfaced. The report also said that one-fourth of the state's rural bridges, or 5,085 of them, are substandard and should be replaced or repaired.

"Every time city shoppers pass a supermarket checkout stand, they pay extra for slow, costly farm-to-market trucking over bad country roads and bridges," said William Clarkson of Kansas City, the Missouri TRIP chairman.

Clarkson said the Missouri State Highway Commission and other road agencies were making a major effort to upgrade rural roads but are hampered by a lack of money. TRIP estimated it would cost $875 million to repair rural roads. There was no estimate of the cost for bridge repairs.

The report said increased production of cattle, soybeans and hogs resulted in 10,201 more truckloads of farm-to-market shipments in 1972 than in 1968, and traffic on rural roads increased 25 per cent in the past five years. TRIP estimated rural traffic would jump 45 per cent in the next 15 years.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

August 27, 1974

Letter to the Editor:

My name is Anna May Bentley Scott and I am asking for your help.

I lost contact with my father, Ed Bentley and/or Ed Russell, in 1966 and I understand he passed away on December 10, 1970. (I just found out this August 1, 1974) I was his one and only child.

I would like to know where my father passed away at and where his burial was, where his last place of residence was and if there was any living relatives. Since I was an only child, his personal belongings would mean a lot to me too.

Maybe some of the following information would help, if someone knew my father. My father, Ed Bentley and/or Russell, was born in Dent County Missouri near Salem, Mo. in 1891. His last known address that I have was Rolands, Missouri. His father, my grandfather, was Chris Bentley. My grandmothers name was Susan Maher and after Chris Bentley was deceased, Susan Maher married a man name Russell. I believe she had two (2) girls during this marriage. I also believe these girls lived in St. Louis, Mo. My father had a cousin name Will Schafer, now deceased, who lived in Bunker, Missouri, just out side of Salem.

I feel if this were published, someone may see it and possibly have some information which will help me. I want to know where my father was deceased, where his personal belongings are and if I have any living relatives.

I sincerely appreciate all the help you can be to me in this matter.

Sincereily

Dear Editor:

We certainly would like to take this means to thank your paper on helping to publicize the presentation of the Fetal Monitor System to the Missouri Delta Community.

This certainly was a splendid manner in informing the public of the availability and use of this fine piece of equipment not only to patients in labor at our local hospital but to patients requiring this specialized service in surrounding hospitals not having this equipment.

We certainly want to thank also the people who worked to secure this equipment and to the many many people who either by donation to the March of Dimes Fund sponsored by the Daughters of Isabella or to the Tootsie Roll Sales for the Mental Retardation Program of the Knights of Columbus who made the purchase of this equipment possible.

Also a big thanks to the Kiwanis Club of Sikeston, th First National Bank, Secu Federal Savings & Loan, an Security National Bank and those individuals who made a direct contribution to this equipment.

Dr. Leandro Cejas and other doctors and the hospital are certainly proud to have a piece of equipment to help save lives of the newborn, in addition, to help prevent mental retardation caused at birth.

We are proud to have been a part of this wonderful project.

Mr. Charles L. Blanton III
Sikeston Daily Standard
Sikeston, Missouri

Dear Mr. Blanton:

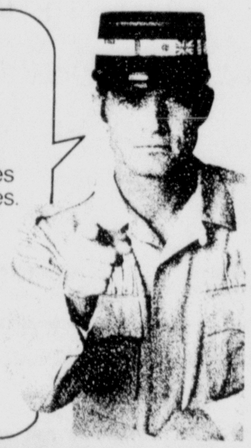

Your East Prairie reporter had a story in the Standard I believe it was last Friday night that contained a statement I would like to make a statement on. It was concerning the resignation of our City Manager Mr. Robert Kakac and she made what I assume was a direct quote from Mr. Kakac but considering her slanted reporting of our council meetings I wouldn't know if it was her opinion or his, and could care less.

The statement was, in effect the City Council constantly berated all City employees except one and Mr. Kakac won't tell me who the one perfect one we have is and since it is Council's opinion we have many many fine city employees may I ask you to print just this paragraph.

Reference is made to the statement in the Friday night issue of the Daily Standard in which the City Manager of East Prairie who will be leaving soon made the statement the City Council constantly berated all City Employes except one. As Mayor of East Prairie and I believe I speak for the entire Council I simply want to say we have many many fine City employees, some of whom have worked for the City for as many as ten to fifteen years. We have employees in every department whom we consider to be above average in their work and their dedication and loyalty to the City .. from the Police Department all the way to the administrative employees, the Clerk and Collector in City Hall. In every department we have some fine employees and are proud of them. It was not necessary to repudiate Mr. Kakac's statement in East Prairie, our local people know the situation, but to the towns surrounding East Prairie we simply want to say .. we have a great many of fine employees and are proud of them.

Yours truly,
LaWanda Douglas, Mayor

Advance sailor in Athens promotes understanding

ATHENS, Greece -- Racial harmony is a necessity for maximum effectiveness in the Navy, and an Advance, Mo., sailor is helping promote better understanding between the races.

Chief Operations Specialist Bobby J. Clark, a race relations education instructor is trying to promote better Navy human goals and equal opportunity policies by helping his fellow Navy men identify and eliminate both individual and institutional racism that occurs within the military service.

The chief petty officer is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Guy D. Clark of Advance, Mo.

Chief Clark's profession would normally have him working as a supervisor of radar operator- technicians within the ship's combat information center. He and his men would be responsible for detecting and tracking both air and surface contacts on the ship's radar and reporting their movements. This team on any combat ship acts as the eyes of the ship in both peacetime and combat situations.

"I saw things happening within the Navy, and something needed to be done about it," the chief said as he was explaining why he entered the race relations education field. "There had to be some kind of education within the Navy to eliminate racism," he said. The Navy began a large-scale program three years ago and asked for volunteers to enter the race relations program, "so I volunteered," he stated.

The chief is presently serving with the race relations

education division of the human resources management unit attached to the Navy's fleet support office here. The office is located in the heart of downtown Athens.

The fleet support office was established in July 1972 to support Sixth Fleet Navy ships homeported here and those which visit this port. The Navy began its homeporting program in Athens during July of the same year with the arrival of Carrier Group Two staff and their dependents. In September, six ships from Destroyer Squadron 12 and their dependent families came on the scene.

Both units were sent to Athens as part of the forward deployment or "homeporting" program devised to give Navy families more time together and to get the best utilization from a reduced number of operational Navy ships.

The Navy realized that within its structure there were racial problems between white and minority group sailors, mostly stemming from attitudes developed from childhood, which men of all groups brought into the Navy with them.

The Navy, like any American city, has people from many ethnic groups. Racial tensions and problems had developed within the Navy community just as many cities have had the same problems within their population.

Recognizing this, Admiral Elmo R. Zumwalt, Chief of Naval Operations, ordered the establishment of race relations education programs throughout the Navy. The programs are now well established, and attendance at race relations education courses is now required of Navymen from seaman to admiral each year.

Chief Clark feels that the Navy has no race relations problems which the country as a whole does not have, and, unlike some segments of the society, the Navy is taking decisive and wide- ranging action to eliminate the problems and promote understanding.

The Navy employs people from every walk of life and from every corner of the U.S. and its territories. Minority personnel are doing every job within the Navy from cooking the meals to firing guided missiles, from many jobs that run a ship to commanding the ship.

Chief Clark and his family arrived in the Athens area during December 1972 to be attached to the guided missile destroyer escort USS Page, one of the six destroyers homeported here. During June 1973 he became the ship's race relations education officer. The chief has been on temporary duty with the fleet support office this year to further his education and training in race relations.

Clark's family originally accompanied him to Athens, but have recently returned to the States. They are living in Virginia Beach, Va., where they will make their home until Clark's return.

A 26- year Navy veteran, Clark said his family loved Greece and enjoyed their tour in this cultural city. "I felt completely safe about my family when I went to sea," he said. "They were more safe here in Athens than any other city we have lived in.

"The language barrier was the biggest problem we encountered when we arrived here," he said. "You have to let the Greeks know that you are attempting to learn their language and that you want to get along with them. When they know this, there are no longer any problems."

Each member of the Clark family speaks a little Greek, but their 10- year- old daughter Susan was the Greek spokesman for the family ... or at least they thought so.

"One day Susan went to a local shop for some olive oil and came home with a bottle of honey," Mrs. Clark said. "Have you ever tried making an oil and vinegar salad dressing using honey?" Needless to say the Clarks used another form of salad dressing that particular time.

The Clarks' three children, Jeff, 14, Susan, 10, and Steven, 9, learned their basic Greek language skills in the U.S. school located here. Bobby and Barbara learned what they know of the Greek language in their every day encounters.

"Our family had no serious problems while living in Greece, but others have," Clark said. "The main problem with the American people is that they won't get out into the local community. Most will stay in their little cliques, especially when their husband's ships are at sea," he theorizes.

Clark feels that being stationed in Greece has been especially educational for his children. They learned the Greek language, culture, history and traditions first hand. "I also think that the lack of English language television is an asset," he explained.

"Without the all- day TV, the kids had to plan and do more things on their own, making them better people for it," he remarked.

Hearnes lauded as man of action

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Former Gov. Warren E. Hearnes was lauded as a man of action Wednesday in ceremonies for the unveiling of a portrait of Hearnes.

The portrait of the two-term Democrat, now practicing law in St. Louis and Charleston, was painted in 1965 by former St. Louis Cardinals baseball star Curt Flood.

The 2½-foot by 3-foot portrait will hang in the Capitol rotunda alongside portraits of other ex-governors.

At the ceremony was Carl Flood, brother of Curt Flood.

Carl, also a painter, is serving a 20-year prison sentence for robbery but is working under a job release program for Lt. Gov. William C. Phelps.

In remarks prepared for delivery at the unveiling, the Senate president pro tem, Democrat William Cason of Clinton, praised Hearnes for his support of higher education, for helping to raise Missouri's mental health standards and for being "always compassionate to those on welfare who had no lobbyists to plead their cause."

Cason noted that some of his critics fell out with Hearnes and accused him of arm twisiting in the legislature.

Audit of fuel users could reduce tax losses on diesel gas

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Reduction of losses in the collection of tax on diesel fuel in Missouri can only be accomplished through complete audits of the fuel users, an oil industry official told a special legislative committee Wednesday.

In response to a proposal to place the tax collection burden on the fuel distributor rather than the user as is currently done, John Denman, executive director of the Missouri Oil Council, said that plan would only cause increased paper work for the state and still afford possibly inaccurate information.

Charges have been made in the past that users of diesel fuel have escaped paying the higher seven-cent-a-gallon tax required on fuel used for highway travel by claiming they have used it for now-highway purposes. Diesel fuel used for non-highway purposes is only taxed the 3 per cent sales tax, about 12 cents per dollar less than the highway use tax.

The change in the collection system, proposed to the joint committee on energy resources by oil jobber B. A. Brown, would have required diesel fuel users to certify to the distributor at the time of the purchase how much fuel would be used for non-highway purposes and how much would be used in over-the-road travel, paying the appropriate tax to the distributor. Presently, users report to the state monthly the same information and pay the tax directly to the state.

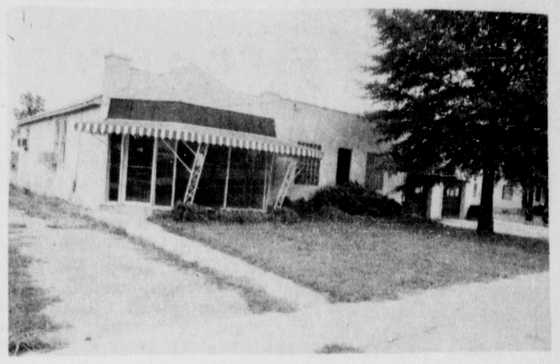

But in either case, Denman said, the user can supply false information to obtain the lower tax rate.

"You have to audit the commercial user," he claimed.

State Revenue Chief James Spradling told the committee, however, that he did not believe losses in collection of diesel fuel tax are anywhere near $40 million, as some have claimed.

While admitting that there is "slippage," he said his department is working on regulations to improve reporting procedures and will also have some recommendations for legislative action by early October.

Kris Kristofferson: 'Me and music are mutually rewarding'

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Finishing a late breakfast of ham and eggs, Kris Kristofferson set back in a roomy, farmhouse kitchen and lit a cigarette.

Beside him sat his wife and singing partner Rita Cooledge. On her lap their 5-month-old daughter, Casey, was being fed.

"You know, everyone says I'm more relaxed now," Kristofferson said. "And maybe I am.

"I kind of think it's the way you expect me to be like now that I have an old lady and a baby. Everyone says how laid back I am.

"I just really have a lucky life right now. I guess that 38 is time to get a little serious. You have to get rid of your teenage anxieties sometime.

"But relaxed? Man, you should have seen me last night."

Last night, Kristofferson, Rita and their band had been working on the final touches of a new album. For a week they had been recording at the studio-farm outside Nashville. They hadn't had time for social visits with some of their best friends.

Before coming to Tennessee, they finished a summer show tour in Japan, Australia and New Zealand. Before that, Kristofferson had acted in Sam Peckinpaw's film "Bring Me the Head of Alfredo Garcia."

Kristofferson walked out of the kitchen, across the lawn to a log cabin which houses the recording studio. He opened a beer and lit another cigarette.

"That tour was fun, but demanding as hell. I imagine there will be a time when I'm not performing, but I hope there is never a time when I will not be writing.

"I don't think I would ever be satisfied if I wasn't writing music. Me and music are sort of mutually rewarding.

"I'm writing as much now as I ever did. It kind of goes in cycles, and I don't know if the songs are as good, better or what.

"You know I still get scared performing. It's not maybe as bad as at first. I don't know if it would be the same if I didn't get scared. It's like getting sick before football games. When I stopped getting sick before games, it wasn't the same. Something was lost.

"Johnny Cash is the same way. I've seen John so scared before a show he was just like this," Kristofferson said, shaking his hand nervously.

Kristofferson played back tapes of the previous night's work. After one song, a rendition of Larry Gatlin's "Rain," he laughed: "Man Rita's voice is so good I'm almost afraid to go on stage with her.

How to Use Exercise Bicycle

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb — With all the emphasis on exercising today, I feel my husband and I do not get enough of it. We bought an exercising bike. What I would like to know is, how can we go about it. I mean, how much time to start with, and how should we increase the time. I have started with five minutes three times a day. Am I overdoing it?

Dear Reader — There isn't any set rule for this. It also depends a lot on the type of exercise bicycle you're using. Some are fixed so you can adjust the tension on the wheel and thereby increase the load. People who are in reasonably good physical condition to start with can obviously begin at a higher level than those who are unaccustomed to any significant amounts of physical exercise. In general, and it has to be simply a general rule of thumb for the person I have not seen and not been able to examine or know what his exercise history is, I suggest that he start at a very low level. Of course, if he already has any medical problems he is aware of, he should talk to the doctor before beginning any exercise program.

For the individuals who appear to be in good health and have just not had any significant amounts of exercise, I usually suggest that they start bicycling for three to five minutes at a speed which is comfortable for them and at a tension which doesn't create very much stress on the legs. That is, it should be comfortable and well within the capacity of the person without any strain. Then, the amount of exercise can be increased about a minute a week. Always make certain to stay within a comfortable speed and tension on the wheel and never exercise at a rate that makes you feel that the legs are working too hard or that it causes the heart to beat too fast. If you want to take your heart rate while you're exercising, you can usually do it. For medically unsupervised exercise you should try to keep your heart rate below 120 beats per minute while exercising. If the exercise effort causes your heart to beat any faster than this, you are either pumping too fast or the tension has been turned too tight on the exercise bicycle.

Exercise bicycles are fine because they can be placed in front of the television set. Individuals who spend much time in front of the television set are the very ones who often need the exercise, and the exercise should be something besides reaching for potato chips and dip or, just as bad, bending the elbow. It also provides a way of occupying yourself while you're doing exercise. Pedaling at a very slow rate without any heavy load on the bicycle during your favorite television program is a good way to program a daily exercise activity. Exercise done during the evening newscast, for example, combines keeping you well informed and keeping you in shape.

Exercise bicycles also have the advantage of eliminating the jarring effect that sometimes occurs with jogging and running type programs. They can also be used by individuals who have balance problems but are still able to do some exercise. Then, of course, they can be used in all kinds of weather indoors.

What's the law?

The case of the high-flying sport

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Zeppo was a motor boat enthusiast who would have been better off wearing a parachute instead of a life preserver. Practicing for an upcoming race, he went zooming down a strange river at 50 miles per hour when, suddenly he went shooting out over a dam.

Finding himself suspended 100 feet in the air above a reservoir, Zeppo quickly raced through the Lord's Prayer as he plunged helter- skelter into the drink below. When he finally bobbled to the surface, he sued the owner of the dam for his injuries.

"What does Zeppo want from me?" queried the owner of the dam. "If he was going to go flying over my dam, he should have been in an airplane instead of a motor boat."

"Not to have posted signs warning that the dam was there," retorted Zeppo, "was sheer carelessness. By the time I discovered his dam dam I needed wings -- and I thought I was going to get them."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make the dam owner pay high- flying Zeppo for his injuries?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that the only rational inference to be drawn from Zeppo's accident was that it was due solely to his own irrational indifference to where he was going on an unfamiliar river at 50 mph. His apparent lack of care for his own safety, concluded the judge, precluded him for collecting for his injuries.

Doctors think tiny infant has chance

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Surgeons here say an operation to save the life of a week-old baby so small he could be cupped in the doctor's hands has been a success.

Lee Allen Bailey was born Aug. 19, about a month prematurely, at the University of Kentucky's Chandler Medical Center. He weighed just over a pound.

Doctors say such infants usually cannot live more than six hours. But despite his size, Lee, the son of Rainey Nora Bell Bailey of Ashland, Ky., showed signs of vitality.

He was placed in a special intensive care unit and carefully watched. Physicians observed that he couldn't keep food down. They took an X ray, which showed that the infant had a bowel obstruction.

They said that without an operation, the child would eventually die from lack of nourishment, but the chance of success in operating on so small an infant were slim.

The baby was fed intravenously until a team of three surgeons and two anesthesiologists was ready to perform the operation on Aug. 28.

The surgeons, led by Dr. Juda Z. Jona, worked for three hours, using instruments designed for delicate eye surgery to remove the obstruction and to insert tubes in the baby's stomach and bowel, which was about the size of a shoestring.

Jona said on Wednesday the operation is considered a temporizing one enabling the baby to carry on body functions and to grow.

Lee has now doubled his birth weight.

"When he has reached four to five pounds we will do a final operation," Dr. Jona said. "If that is successful, that is all he will require."

The final operation, relatively simple compared with the first, would involve suturing the bowel so the digestive system can function normally.

"It was a miracle that he lived until the operation could be performed," Dr. Jona said. "I have never operated on this small a child before. We've done it on lab creatures but never on human beings."

Hayti counselor resigns position

HAYTI— It was an emotional scene in the Hayti City Hall Tuesday night.

After more than 22 years of service to the City of Hayti, James "Tick" Vickrey, city counselor, tendered his resignation to Mayor Fred Chaffin and the Hayti City council.

The lawyer and former prosecuting attorney of Pemiscot County presented his letter of resignation to City Clerk Marcele Russell for her to read to the council.

It had been known for some time that Vickrey would be leaving the county and his position as city counselor of Hayti as well as his law practice in Caruthersville. Two months ago he was presented a plaque of appreciation by the Hayti council.

His letter of resignation:

"In order to enter full time service in the U. S. Government, I hereby reluctantly tender my resignation as city attorney, effective immediately.

"I want to earnestly express my deepest appreciation for the splendid cooperation each of you-- and all other city officers and employees– have at all times given and for the patience and understanding you have always warmly extended to me.

"After more than 22 years of continuous service, I cannot recall a single instance when a requested act of cooperation from any present or past officer or employee was denied to me; and it is especially difficult to leave you at this particular time when I believe the men and women now serving the various offices and departments make up the best team in the entire history of our community.

"Again, I want to thank you for the certificate of appreciation recently awarded for the service I attempted to render. I will treasure it always; and I would like to leave one serious admonition for you to always remember: So long as you serve the City of Hayti in any capacity, you are under a solemn trust as public servants for the most wonderful people in the world– the real "salt of the earth."

"With all the sincerity I am capable of expressing, I pray for God's blessings on each of you and on this community where my heart will always be."

Mayor Chaffin said "I would like to express my thanks for the city for your services." The council voted to accept the city counselor's resignation.

Prior to his resignation, Vickrey turned over to the council his files on the Lee Roy Bain case. Bain resigned as mayor of Hayti April 4 after it was discovered that $2,617.35 had been misappropriated from Hayti city funds. Vickrey also turned over the original warrants amounting to $2,617.35 in addition to the additional warrants found misappropriated via an audit conducted shortly after Bain resigned.

Bain had promised to replace the funds no later than six months from April 3. That date is Oct. 4. Mayor Chaffin told the council that none of the funds have been replaced as yet.

In other council news, a resolution was passed making it possible for insurance companies to issue flood insurance in Hayti. After July 1, 1975, anyone living in a flood zoned area must have this insurance in order to build an addition to a house or build a new house in such an area. Both Steele and Caruthersville already have adopted such resolutions.

The council gave Mayor Chaffin the authority to negotiate with the abstract company and property owners to get easements from Swan Lake Drive to the south city limits on Route J. This will be done in order to extend water lines in that area before the new highway by- pass is built.

City Collector Bob Turnage told the council that he had received a few complaints from people who have noticed cars in the city without city stickers. He recommended a roadblock by city police and the council agreed.

A letter from the Missouri State Highway Commission was read. The letter stated that improvement of Route P in Hayti was not programmed at the present but the improvement will be kept in mind for the future. The letter also said the state will move the city limit sign a mile further east in the near future as a result of the recent annexation election.

If the total being sought by the company is approved, the customers will pay "a little more" than 7.6 per cent, Watson said. He didn't say how much more.

The rate increase is being fought by affected cities, including Sikeston Chaffee, Charleston, East Prairie, Kennett and Malden.

Parma minister, former newspaperman, dies

PARMA — The Rev. George Edward Sisler, 63, pastor of the Parma First Baptist Church for two years, died at 11:45 a.m. Wednesday at his home.

The Rev. Mr. Sisler had been treated for cancer during the past month.

A former newspaperman, he began his newspaper career with the Philadelphia, Pa., Record in 1938. He also worked for The Associated Press in Baltimore.

He served in the Navy from 1925 to 1933 and again from 1940 to 1944. He joined The Commercial Appeal in Memphis, Tenn.; as a reporter in 1951.

In 1952 and 1953, he toured the Far East on three occasions, reporting on Mid-Southerners fighting in the Korean conflict. His reports from the battle lines and battleships were known as "Assignment: Korea."

He was author of "Run, Rebel, Run", a book about the Memphis Daily Appeal's wanderings during the Civil War. It was published in 1959 by Greenwich Publishers.

In 1962, he was commander of American Legion Post No. 1 in Memphis.

When Sisler left The Commercial Appeal in 1964 to become an evangelist, he was serving as the newspaper's promotions editor.

He was ordained a Baptist minister in September 1965 and his first pastorate was at First Baptist Church in Wardell. Before his ordination he had been an evangelist at Bellevue Baptist Church in Memphis and conducted revivals throughout the Mid-South.

On Jan. 1, 1943, he married Maxine Patterson, who survives.

Other survivors include a daughter, Mrs. Janet Gault of Memphis; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George T. Sisler of Kennett; and two brothers, Charles W. Sisler of St. Louis and Dr. Maynard L. Sisler of Kennett.

Services were conducted at 2 p.m. today in the Parma First Baptist Church.

Burial was in a private cemetery at Wardell with Watkins & Sons Funeral Home of Parma in charge of arrangements.

Learning center to serve area

MALDEN — A learning development center for handicapped children will open Oct. 1 in Malden.

The center will be a new six- room metal building consisting of rest rooms, wall- to- wall carpet, and central air and heat. It is located adjacent to the Beckwith Street Elementary School building.

Classes will be established for the orthopedically handicapped, emotionally disturbed, learning disabled, hard of hearing and partially sighted.

BEST ROUND A 67

MAMARONECK, N.Y. (AP) — Best round during the 1974 U.S. Open was the three-under par 67 turned in by 27-year-old Hubert Green of Birmingham, Ala. After opening with a sky-rocketing 81, Green shot his 67 in the second round.

But a pair of 76s in the final two rounds forced Green to settle for a tie for 26th place and $1,300.
